A FOREWORD TO PRESENT-DAY DESCENDANTS OF WILLIAM WARD OF SUDBURY

I, ARTEMAS WARD (Number 2722 of this Genealogy) see in this fourteenth day of March, 1925, a day of many various Thanksgivings.

I feel sure that everyone included in its pages will be thankful that it has appeared, and that it delivers into their hands the names and histories of all the known members of our Ward family.

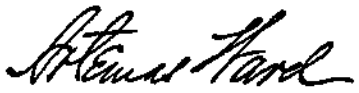

I thank in memory Andrew H. Ward, who in 1851 issued the "Ward Family" and gave me the opportunity to publish this later compilation.

I cheerfully and reverently thank Almighty God that He has spared my life to fulfill in my seventy-seventh year the ambition which started in my tenth year, and I thank Him for having so prospered me that I was able to complete the work, which has been both costly and difficult.

I thank Charles Martyn, compiler and editor of the Genealogy, and I congratulate him on the very successful and wholly satisfactory result of his labors. His accuracy, fidelity, and industry know no limits, and I believe that he will secure greater reward than this commendation of mine in the place that this volume will give him among genealogists.

I thank Philip Leroy Shaw, Mr. Martyn's chief assistant, for his tireless and unstinting devotion to the work—the long hours he gave to it and his conscientious struggle for the nearest possible approach to perfection of genealogical detail. I do not doubt that the ability and energy that he possesses will carry him forward to important positions.

Finally, to each and all of my active office force I extend my sincere thanks for any assistance that they may have contributed to the undertaking, the consummation of which has made me extremely happy.

PREFACE

The covers of this book enclose the tribal story of an Englishman named William Ward who established his family here in the first generation of the settlement of North America. Its pages carry the account of his descendants down to the present day.

Much of the history of our country is told in the life stories of "William Ward of Sudbury" and his descendants.

The first several chapters portray the labors and dangers of the pioneers of Old Massachusetts. The biographies of the succeeding genealogical division supplement their story and disclose various cross-sections of the struggle for independence. They tell also of members of the family participating in the opening of the great Western country, and in the death struggle of the recent World War.

The family has shown a healthy growth since the publication of Andrew H. Ward's "Ward Family" in 1851. That volume recorded 4027 descendants. This new Genealogy gives a record of 10,746. Both totals would be considerably larger if it had been possible to list all descendants. Some are inevitably missing, for it happens many times that families move away, leaving only faint traces that are speedily obliterated.

These 10,746 descendants include 396 graduates from 149 universities, colleges, and normal schools (fifty-six of them from Harvard College and University); fifty-nine representatives and senators in colony, state, and national legislatures; twenty-two judges; army and navy officers in every conflict in which the United States and its predecessor-colonies have been engaged; and a substantial and creditable showing in practically every other calling comprised within modern civilization.

Most numerous in its pages are farmers—as befits a family which set its first American roots in the wild lands of Old Massachusetts and relied upon its crops and its cattle to make its way in the New World, rather than by trade or in other manners. The Ward farmers of today cover every part of the continent—raising sheep in Canada, oranges in Florida, and wheat and corn and cattle in the Central West, and specializing in various other products in various other sections.

Next in numerical importance are school-teachers (both men and women) and ministers of the Gospel—facts worthy of a sturdy pride and a good text for anyone who wishes to reflect upon the part that members of the family have played in welding the nation's children and youths into the citizenry upon which rest all the privileges and institutions which we have slowly and painfully acquired and erected.

Well represented also are the other professions—doctors and lawyers and engineers being the most prominent in the order given. The world of business has given success to a number, and every branch of trade and mechanical art has its exponents. There are writers and architects, salesmen and accountants and railroad men, singers and nurses, and so on in great variety. Prominent among living members is Charles Artemas Ward (4420d), an admiral of the Chilean Navy, and at the moment that this volume goes to press a member of the triumvirate constituting the provisional government of Chile, which has ousted the reactionary revolutionary junta and is arranging for the return of Chile's legally elected president, Arturo Alessandri.

The volume should be an inspiration to every descendant. Let him, or her, note how well the family has borne its share in the development of the continent and with what diversity it has taken its part in the activities of a great nation, and then determine to do his or her utmost to "carry on" with equal strength and honor.

INTRODUCTION

This genealogy of the family of William Ward who settled in Sudbury, Mass., in or about the year 1638 records all his known descendants along male lines and three generations along female lines of marriage into other families.

The first two generations along female lines married into other families are treated in full. Of the third—i.e., the grandchildren of Ward daughters—only the names are given. To have continued the female lines further would not only have been to step far outside the name "Ward"—it would also have duplicated entire sections of the genealogies of other names.

There are errors of course. Also there are omissions. Some of the latter are unavoidable. Others might have been supplied if publication had been delayed for a still more thorough search of records and depositories—but if one were to postpone the printing of a book of this kind until every available possibility had been exhausted, the book would never appear.

I have avoided the conventional method of padding the first pages with undigested, and largely indigestible, material in the form of verbatim wills and other documents, disconnected extracts from public and private records, etc. Instead, I have told in narrative form the life of William Ward and his family in the New World, maintaining equal accuracy and embodying much more information.

I have not appended to each individual his or her ancestry by generations, as frequently in modern genealogies. Both ancestry and descent can so readily be traced that neither the extra space entailed nor the monotony of persistent reiteration seemed to be justified.

Nor have I wasted space in comment on, or the discussion of, debatable points of minor importance, such prolixity being of more interest to genealogists than of value to descendants.

On the other hand, for the sake of clearness, many additional pages have been consumed by practically avoiding abbreviations and by the free repetition of the names of birthplaces, etc., instead of attempting to evade such repetition.

INTRODUCTION

Except only the grandchildren of female Wards, I have given each descendant a serial number instead of numbering only those who are continued to separate headings. This aids identification and the noting of relationship, and also has the advantage of showing the holder's approximate position among the descendants of William Ward of Sudbury.

The aim has been to make a volume that will be at once accurate as a genealogical record and of interesting and comfortable reading as family history.

Prior to this final compilation, work had several times been started on the genealogical portion of the volume. Credit is due for additions made at those earlier dates by the late Paul Theodore Bliss Ward (Number 3077 of the Genealogy), the Reverend George K. Ward (a genealogist but not a descendant of William Ward of Sudbury), and the late William H. Blanchard of Montpelier, Vt.

During the last several months of editorial preparation I have been ably assisted by Mr. Philip Leroy Shaw.

The task of abstracting the Wards and their immediate connections from the printed Massachusetts vital records was performed by Paul Theodore Bliss Ward. He added also the story of Elizabeth, the eighth ((known) child of William Ward, of whom no record, save her birthdate, appeared in the "Ward Family," 1851.

The production of the work has been an undertaking of considerable magnitude, yet it is only one of numerous related enterprises carried through by its publisher, Mr. Artemas Ward of the Seventh Generation.

Prior to him, nothing had been done in memory of Ward ancestors excepting the mentioned publication of the "Ward Family" in 1851 and the erection of a family monument in the Shrewsbury Cemetery.

The burial-stone of Elizabeth, the first Ward mother in the New World, lay for generations forgotten and neglected in a disused, uncared-for cemetery of Marlborough, Mass. The name of her most distinguished descendant, General Artemas Ward—despite the high tribute paid to him by John Adams as a man "universally esteemed, beloved and confided in by his army and their Country"—was permitted to slip almost into oblivion without any attempt to give him the place rightfully his due. Other landmarks and heirlooms, and other descendants of worth and prominence, were unknown to a majority of the family as of kin to them.

From his boyhood onward Mr. Ward had felt a strong impulse to rectify these conditions, and an earnest desire that the family should "find itself"—that the honors and distinctions earned by its members should be the common possession of all instead of being known to only a few.

The dreams of youth are not readily attained. As Mr. Ward mounted towards success and distinction in the business world he found a multitude of claims upon his attention repeatedly frustrating attempts to make his dreams become realities. Time always pressed and the right kind of assistance was not always available.

Up to this point the story is a common one, many times repeated—plans long envisioned and long hoped for, too often to be finally pushed aside and dropped, immersed by conflicting circumstances.

This story differs in the fact that Mr. Ward never relinquished his dream. In 1918 came the first substantial result—the erection of the General Ward Memorial Entrance to the Shrewsbury Cemetery. Next followed, in 1921, the publication of "The Life of Artemas Ward, the first Commander-in-Chief of the American Revolution," a volume which represented a labor of five full years, during all of which period the heavy expenses of research were borne by Mr. Ward. The reception accorded the volume by reviewers, historians, and teachers justified his long-held belief in the greater recognition due General Ward. The work has found its way into every library of importance, and every university and college throughout the United States.

Succeeding these two steps came many others.

He bound into five large morocco-covered volumes the manuscripts of the time of General Ward and his father, Colonel Nahum Ward, that had come down with the Artemas Ward House, and presented them to the Massachusetts Historical Society, Boston, to be cared for in perpetuity in its fireproof vaults and alcoves and to be held in trust as a valuable original-source for students and historians.

In the preparation of these big volumes, 19½ by 13 inches in height and width, each of the more than 1000 manuscripts was covered on both sides with invisible gauze for its preservation.

Also in Boston, he placed portraits of General Ward in the Old and New State Houses and a memorial tablet in the home of the New England Historic Genealogical Society.

In Marlborough he built the Pioneer Memorial Pier at the entrance to Spring Hill Cemetery; embedded Elizabeth Ward's headstone in a granite monument; and set all the other Ward gravestones in that cemetery in separate concrete slabs. In addition, he placed a new fence around the cemetery. As recent Marlborough administrations also have displayed a laudable interest in the upkeep of the town's early burial-grounds and have made regular appropriations for their care, Old Spring Hill is now one of the most attractive of ancient Massachusetts cemeteries—a strong contrast to the weed and bramble overrun disgrace of a few years ago.

In Shrewsbury Mr. Ward has kept the Artemas Ward House in repair and has maintained it as a place of historical interest accessible to visitors, with a bold marker commanding the highway to Boston; and in January of 1924 he presented to the town the Artemas Ward Annex, a handsome stone and brick addition to the Howe Memorial Library, dedicating it to the memory of the General. The Annex contains a Children's Room, a History Room, and a modern stack-room capable of housing from twenty to thirty thousand books. Further, he has set a tablet to Artemas Ward in the Shrewsbury Congregational Church —the General had been one of the residents to help raise its frame when it was erected, a "new meeting-house," in 1766. And in the courthouse of Worcester, Mass., he has placed a third portrait of the General.

The Marlborough memorial pier and monument, the Artemas Ward Annex, the Shrewsbury Church tablet, and the New England Historic Genealogical Society tablet, are illustrated in this volume. The Memorial Entrance to the Shrewsbury Cemetery and the Artemas Ward House are depicted in "The Life of [General] Artemas Ward."

The accumulative result of these projects has been very marked. They have gone far towards establishing for the Ward family the recognition to which it is entitled for the contributions its members have made to the upbuilding of the country. Recent references to General Ward have shown him the consideration that was formerly lacking. His home town of Shrewsbury has given the title of "The General Artemas Ward School" to one of her largest public schools. And Marlborough has bestowed the name of "The Artemas Ward Playground" on the twenty-acre recreation center she is building.

Conjoined with these special plans of Mr. Ward was for a number of years the collection of Americana, printed and manuscript, specializing in Eastern Massachusetts and the early days of the Revolution. The books and pamphlets thus acquired, more than 1500 titles, he recently presented to the Shrewsbury library.

He is a Tercentenary member of the New England Historic Genealogical Society; Life member of the Bostonian Society; Life member of the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities; Life member of the New York Genealogical and Biographical Society; Life member of the New England Society of New York; and a member for many years of the City Club, Aldine Association, and Church Club, New York City. He was one of the founders of the Sphinx Club, New York City.

Much, or all, of the foregoing and of the biographical material given in his numerical position in this volume is of common or readily ascertainable information concerning Mr. Ward. The full measure of his personality can be appreciated only by those who have been in long contact with him in his daily life and activities. Such has been my privilege. The compilation of this volume; the preparation of "The Life of [General] Artemas Ward"; and the execution of other Ward projects, have necessitated close association for a number of years and under all conditions—in days of success-crowned research and in periods of unprofitable investigation; in fair weather and foul; in good health and poor; in times of general prosperity and in periods when the country's industries slackened. Through all such circumstances Mr. Ward maintained the buoyant enthusiasm that is characteristic of him, the same unswerving adherence to his plans, and the same kindly courtesy for all those engaged upon them.

When the bulk of the work on the Genealogy had been done and the matter was passing to the printer's hands, Mr. Ward fell dangerously ill. The doctors attributed his breakdown in part to his too close application to the preparation of the book, yet so strong was his interest in it that even on his sick-bed he kept constantly in touch with its production. Also while thus confined, he consummated a plan long held in mind by which the Artemas Ward House will become a public museum of colonial and revolutionary life and a permanent memorial to the General.

Such is the man who is responsible for the production of this Genealogy and for all the other Ward projects of this generation. Every descendant, and particularly every owner of a copy of this work, will be interested in this brief story and description. For further concerning him, turn to Number 2722, page 362.

PART ONE

THE EMIGRATION OF WILLIAM WARD, AND HIS LIFE AND THAT OF HIS FAMILY IN THE NEW WORLD

CHAPTER I

The Search for the English Home of "William Ward of Sudbury."

William Ward "of Sudbury," head of the line to which this book is dedicated, was born in England about 1603. He emigrated, probably in the spring of 1638, to the new Colony of Massachusetts Bay in New England, bringing with him his second wife and five children.

In the earliest records his name is written both "Ward" and "Warde"—at first, commonly with the final "e." Later, it appears consistently without the "e."

In its original use, the name—with either spelling, or as "Weard," etc.—signified a guard, military or civil.

From what part of England did he come? Who were his ancestors? These questions must go unanswered as in the case of many another of the country's founders.

Determined efforts have been made to obtain the information. A few years ago I visited England and directed inquiries to every parish possessing a register that goes back to 1638. I followed clues in person and by correspondence in three hundred and eighty-nine parishes—thirty-nine of England's forty counties being represented. But to no avail!

Some of the clues were entirely without merit and were speedily discarded. They included entries of the names Deane, Elward, Everard, Harte, Warren, and Waite, the old style writing having been misread and reported as "Ward" or "Warde."

The true Ward entries embrace the baptisms of several infants of the name of William (or Gulielmus) Ward or Warde of about the right date, but it was not found possible to identify any one of them with "William Ward of Sudbury." Most of them were eliminated by finding their deaths recorded in England, or residence there after our William Ward had emigrated to America, or children of the wrong names, etc.

Three of them remain enigmas. There was disclosed no information to tell their fate: how long or where they lived, or when or where they died; whether they remained in the parishes of their birth, or moved to other parishes, or emigrated. These three frequently recur to my imagination. Was one of them William Ward of Sudbury? If so, which one?

Perhaps not any one of the three. The true entries of William Ward himself, his wives, and his children, may be patiently awaiting discovery in the register of a parish whose incumbent did not heed my circular appeal to consult his records, or who (quite pardonably) was unable to recognize the entries in the weird penmanship puzzles which the pages of many of the old registers present to the uninitiated.

It is possible that they are not in any register. English parish records are very far from complete. Some of those early pastors were so lazy or so careless or so obstinately defiant of civil decrees that they entirely omitted the required entries of baptisms, marriages, and deaths, leaving the pages blank for years at a stretch.

And, if made, the entries may have been in one of the numerous registers which have been lost or destroyed.

The "bishops' transcripts" of the records are similarly incomplete.

The search was continued through a long list of wills in Somerset House, London, and elsewhere, and many documents in the Public Record Office and the British Museum.

There remains, of course, a great deal of material in the two latter, and various other, depositories that time did not permit me to inspect, and it is one of my dreams that some day I may be permitted to delve deeper.

There were several finds that would have satisfied, have even rejoiced, an easy-going family historian or the uncritical genealogist so much in evidence a few years ago. It would have been the most facile thing in the world to have adopted one of the three possible William Wards of the parish registers and thus have established the much desired "English connection."

It would not even have been necessary to have ransacked either the registers or the transcripts, nor to have scanned innumerable wills. There was at hand in the published "Visitations" a William Warde who fitted all the "certainties" and "possibilities" of Andrew H. Ward's introduction to his "Ward Family," 1851. There was, it is true, no confirmation—but neither was there any contradiction—and the connection carried a fully authenticated coat-of-arms!

All these "possibilities" have been set aside. This volume makes no claims or assertions concerning the English ancestry of "William Ward of Sudbury." All that we know concerning his English life is contained within the first paragraph of this chapter.

CHAPTER II

The England and the North America of the Youth of William Ward. His Emigration.

The England which gave birth to William Ward was a nation developing into an empire, a nation which had drunk of the pride of world place and achieved a new measure of prosperity. A nation also in which unrest was being bred by many ferments, economic, political, and religious.

It was a strange England which travailed—not easily recognized today.

The sixteenth century had seen marked manufacturing and commercial growth, but it was still essentially an agricultural country, with half its grain grown in open lands of common cultivation, dotted with manor-houses (imposing and otherwise), and village groups of the dwellings of small farmers (or yeomen), artisans, and laborers. It was distinguished in parts by great flocks of sheep which had encroached upon its arable land. The dense forests of earlier generations had disappeared, leaving only a moderate, an insufficient, acreage of woodland.

The population was less than four million. London was the only city of size. No other place had grown beyond the status of a country town.

The standard of education was high among a select few but low among the people in general. Customs and manners were coarse; conversation, and plays, and books practised broad freedom. The fastidious cleanliness of later generations was unknown. Except among the stricter Puritans, drunkenness was a national custom, and immorality but a peccadillo. Superstition saturated all classes and there was a general belief in and fear of witches and witchcraft.

And ever in the background the gallows reaped its yearly toll of victims. In those days in England (as elsewhere in Europe) the government and judiciary recklessly wasted the human resources of the nation, blotting out the lives of its citizens for almost any crime. The prohibited catching of a wild rabbit was ample cause for a man to be hanged.

Withal, a people hardy and enterprising. And during the recent decades of Elizabeth—a mighty queen, poor in health but strong of brain and will—English "sea-dogs," backed by English "Merchant Adventurers," had been, as never before, exploring and trading and fighting upon and across the seas and oceans, seeking new routes, new sources, and new outlets, elbowing their way toward maritime dominion. Englishmen had found their way everywhere on the water that gain and fighting beckoned. Nor were they the less successful because of the many occasions on which there was little to distinguish the acts of English armed merchantmen, or of vessels of the royal navy, from those of out-and-out buccaneers.

Thus we enter the seventeenth century and the birthday of William Ward.

One hundred and eleven years have passed since the discovery of the New World, and Spanish (and Portuguese) colonization has progressed so far that there is a well attended university in Mexico City, and other universities and colleges in South America, yet the great territory comprised within the twentieth-century United States and Canada stretched its broad expanse all but untouched by the white man. For a hundred years English, French, Spanish, and Portuguese have fished and summered in the Newfoundland waters, and for more than half that period occasional Frenchmen have hunted and traded along the Saint Lawrence, but no settlers dispute the Indians' possession save Spain's meager handful in Florida and her few colonists in New Mexico.

The vast spaces have vainly invited. The mirage of miracles having faded—disclosing neither the road to Asia, nor gold, nor eternal life—the Spanish and Portuguese openers of the New World continued to direct their main energies southward. England and France had not yet embarked upon their careers as colonizers, nor their duel for New World empire.

Another turn of the wheel is due. William Ward's childhood sees the prologue of the conquest of the continent. France establishes a little settlement at the mouth of the Annapolis River, Nova Scotia—and another at Quebec—and, despite vicissitudes, they live. England plants a colony in Virginia, also to be buffeted by tribulations, but also it lives. England and France have joined Spain in taking root in the North-American continent.

Religious ferment, furthermore, is working to fruition in England. In 1603 the large Puritan element in the church—also the Roman Catholics—had awaited the concessions they expected from the ascension of a Presbyterian king, James the sixth of Scotland and the first of England, only to be hugely disappointed.

This disappointment stimulated a movement of prime importance in the world's history.

While Ward was still a youth he heard the story of the Pilgrims' venture and their struggle to maintain their foothold in the "New England"—their heroic fight against hunger and disease, their fearful losses; and, later, their final victory as a pioneer religious community fairly established.

These happenings stimulated the imagination of many Englishmen—and Englishwomen. Of influence too was a slack in the woolen and shipbuilding and other callings. There was not, and never has been, a large margin of comfortable condition for the bulk of the population of England, and the pinch of any depression quickly radiates through the ranks.

So it came to pass that year by year more thousands turned to the thought of a new life across the Atlantic where opportunity might be greater, and presently in increasing numbers they were migrating overseas: some to Virginia, others to the West Indies, particularly to Barbadoes.

By this time Ward was a young married man with little John and Joanna in his home.

Then came the conception of the Massachusetts Bay Colony. Joanna was still within her second year and John, the firstborn, only four, when a Puritan fleet of seventeen ships carried over more than a thousand souls within the single span of 1630.

King Charles the First meantime had succeeded to the throne. He elected to follow his father's policies and was to travel still further the dangerous path of absolutism. A good man in many ways, but with the wrong viewpoint for the England of his reign and lacking the strength to cope with the conditions which beset him. He, as had his father, lacked also Queen Elizabeth's personal patriotism, her intense nationalism, and her ability to focus in herself her people's pride of growth and achievement.

The year 1628 had seen the last English parliament which was to meet for eleven years. There followed the times in which the King, abetted by his Star Chamber, trod heavily on English pride and sensibilities and essayed the hazardous practise of helping himself to funds by forced loans, compulsory knighthoods at high prices, monopolies of great variety,* and divers other devices. When the antiquated Ship Money levy was stretched to the breaking point. When the country rolled uneasily in the suspicion that the King's party, including the prelates, was piloting it back into the Roman church. When Laud as Archbishop earned the hatred of the Puritans which was in a later year to cost him his head.

One or another, or all of these causes affected many men of varied fortunes. The tide of emigration rose. Taverns and other public places witnessed numerous sales by auction, and much bargaining of miscellaneous farm and household goods—country gentlemen and their yeoman constituents raising money for the voyage and for their settlement overseas, and disposing of such of their belongings as they could not take with them. Laborers who could not hope to pay for their passage obtained it by hiring themselves out to work abroad for those who could.

Various parts of the New World were now open to emigrants, but to Ward (as to many others) "New England" seemed the most desirable, for there most nearly could one hope to duplicate the old English village life. There also could every man immediately become an independent landowner—a strong appeal in all ages and especially potent in parts where English village life had been restricted in opportunity, and sometimes wiped out, by the seizure and enclosure of thousands of acres of common land by unscrupulous overlords. And of New England, the Massachusetts Bay project was the largest and most promising—particularly attractive furthermore to those of strict Puritan faith, for its leaders had seized the opportunity to establish in the New World a miniature commonwealth molded upon Puritan tenets and convictions.

Not that clear-headed men still expected to find an El Dorado across the northern seas. The first New England emigrants had been buoyed with roseate hopes, but those who planned to follow needed, instead, high courage and resolution. There were no longer visions of a land of "milk and honey." The tales sent home in writing, or brought back in person, had proved that the new domain was not for dreamers or idlers. Many had gone unprepared for the difficulties to be en-

* The Privy Council registers show that several members of the Ward tribe got into trouble for disregard of these royal edicts in "restraint of trade."

On October 22, 1634, A. Warde was arrested for "divers misdemanors and contempts, against his Mats proclamation" concerning tobacco and for "abusing his Mats patentee for retayling of tobacco within ye towne of Oswestri in ye county of Sallopp."

Again on December 16, of the following year, Thomas Warde was up before Archbishop Laud and other members of the Privy Council in Star Chamber session, having been arrested "for going up and down the country with a Lyon." A monopoly of that particular branch of the show business had been "graunted" to a Mr. Gill, and he was the complainant whose protest resulted in the warrant.

countered, and "missing of their expectations, returned home and railed against the Country." Numbers had gone with the mistaken idea that the colony would afford immediate support, and provisions were frequently "deare and scant."

Various things had grown in the telling. The rattlesnake was depicted as a flying creature that could kill a man with its breath!

Yet each year saw a number of "Mayflowers" beating their way across the ocean, each with its complement of English families courageously seeking homes on the outer rim of the great unknown continent of North America.

The quotations above are from Wood's "New England's Prospect," a work which must have an impelling interest for every descendant of William Ward of Sudbury, for it is not to be doubted that he and his family devoured its every line. The first edition appeared in 1634, with succeeding issues in 1635 and 1637, so great was the demand. One can picture the absorption with which its pages were read—the most concise and complete contemporary account of that part of the New World: setting forth its attractions and disadvantages; telling of its climate, of the products of its soil, of its beasts, birds, and fishes, of the several "plantations" already established; telling what clothing should be included in an emigrant's equipment, what supplies he should take with him. Concluding with a second part devoted to the most fascinating topic of all—the Indians, their appearance and habits, their methods of fighting, their forms of worship, their language, and their women, etc. That the Indians in the vicinity of Massachusetts Bay had, a few years earlier, been greatly reduced by pestilence did not dissipate their fearsome glamour, but rather added to it the threat of a new strange plague that might at any time strike again.

Copies of the first edition of Wood's "New England Prospect" bring high prices today. One was sold at a recent New York auction for $2800. Anything below a thousand dollars is a bargain.

It is an inspiring thought that a book which William Ward purchased for a shilling or two should now be worth $2800. It is well within possibility that the copy which brought that price was the very one which he read and discussed with his family.

The continued exodus to Massachusetts Bay excited apprehension. The government felt that the conditions were different from those of other English colonies. Plymouth Colony with its meager population and scant resources had been regarded with complaisance even when it had failed to develop into a financially profitable enterprise for its underwriters. The settlements in the West Indies greatly increased English trade and London incomes. Those in Virginia also spelled large profits from the tobacco trade, and in addition served as a welcome vent for those "undesirables" whom the "Customer of London" described in a memorial to the Privy Council as "better out than within the Kingdom." But another story was this recent persistent emigration to New England, this "disorderly passing out of the Kingdom," of thousands of British subjects, carrying with them much wealth in cattle, provisions, and other stores, to a part of the world whose estimated future commerce with the mother country was very small compared with the immediate drain upon her.

Political exigencies had favored the first Puritan exodus, but its revival in 1633 and its continuance in the years following were very differently regarded. The King and his Privy Council distrusted the new transatlantic commonwealth, and the expiring "Council for New England" aided the plan to disrupt the charter of its foundation. The Privy Council attempted to apply the brakes and declared that none henceforth were to leave without licenses. The requirements included oaths of allegiance and affidavits that emigrants were not "subsidy men"—i.e., subjects whose lands or goods had been levied on to make up a "subsidy," or tax—and searchers were appointed to prevent unlicensed emigration. But the government was too troubled to be efficient and the empire continued to leak much of its issue for the upbuilding of a future rival.

How long Ward planned his emigration with his family, I know not. Certain it is that many days and still more numerous evenings were spent in absorbing cogitations. Finally came the decision that they too would stake out a home in the New World. . . . Then followed the plans and discussions of ways and means. . . .

His family was larger now by the births of Obadiah, Richard, and Deborah. His first wife had died and he had taken a new partner—Elizabeth, whose tombstone may still be seen in the old Spring Hill Cemetery of Marlborough, Mass.

It was resolved that they should make the voyage in the spring of 1638. That is at least an excellent guess, both because of the number who did go then and because of Ward's first appearance in Sudbury as a fellow settler with some of them. Then in the spring the journey to London by stage-coach. . . .

London may not have been entirely new to William Ward, but it probably was to his family. It was a rambling sort of city, almost entirely of wooden buildings, hugging the shores of the Thames—the river its main highway, busy both with ships to and from all parts of the world and with boats of local traffic—the boats doing most of the work for which taxis and other automobiles, motor-buses and trucks, ply today.

A most picturesque city! The people who sat in the boats, and those who passed along the irregular streets ashore, would seem startlingly theatric to modern eyes. All classes in England, particularly in London, had been seized "with a rage for apparrell," and one saw not only women most gaudily attired, but also men going about their daily tasks in satins and silks, with padded doublets and great ruffs around their necks, with colored feathers in their hats and gold embroidery on their variously colored shoes, with hair curled and perfumed and perhaps ornamented with a rose or a piece of jewelry! Much of this finery was soiled and often it was confined to only one or two such touches—and on a costume most incongruous—but, except the most degraded, few there were who escaped entirely the infection of this fever for self adornment. Think not however that there was necessarily anything weak or effeminate about the man who curled and perfumed his hair and carried a rose in it! Those were days in which men held life cheaply and were ready to take or surrender it at any moment on slight provocation. Every man, unless he were very poor indeed, carried a sword or a dagger, and if he had neither, he probably carried, or had handy, a heavy stick or club as a weapon of both offense and defense.

This "rage for apparrell" had bred a new flock of storekeepers. One writer complainingly notes that "Forty years ago there were not twelve haberdashers in London who sold fancy caps, glasses, swords, daggers, girdles; and now from the Tower to West Minster Abbey, every street is full of them."

The other extreme of the picture was furnished by the very wretched poor, who lived and died homeless, sick, and uncared for in the streets.

There was, indeed, much to be seen in London, but for William Ward and his family there was nothing that compared in interest with the eight vessels at their moorings awaiting the day on which their masters should set sail for America.

What style and size of craft were they that thus engaged attention? Instead of a huge modern steamship, picture a little vessel of about 200 tons—100 feet or so in extreme length "from taffrail to knight-head"; 24-foot beam or thereabout; three-masted; short and low in the waist, and high in bow and stern—somewhat "blocky" in general effect. The very smallest transatlantic passenger vessel sailing from New York today has thirty times her tonnage, and the largest would make 250 to 300 of her!

She will travel slowly when she has taken on her heavy load of humans, cattle, and freight, but she has smart under-water lines which give fair speed under more favorable conditions.

Several cannons of good size are on the main deck; lighter guns on the poop; and a long-range large-caliber gun on the forecastle. For in those days no ship went to sea unarmed.

When full spread, her canvas wings display a small sprit-sail, square sails on the fore and main masts, and a lateen sail on the mizzen-mast.

The passengers for these eight ships came by single families, by twos and threes, and larger parties, from various counties, north and south. Many brought with them rumors which added to the general excitement. Would the ships be allowed to sail? Most of those going had sold all their belongings, often at high sacrifices, to finance their emigration. Many, after paying for their passage, had invested a considerable part of what money remained in grain and other provisions, bought in a high market, for their maintenance while establishing themselves in New England. Few had the special emigration licenses which the King's Council required. Suppose they should be turned back? Suppose that even more drastic punishment should be meted out?

There was a superabundance of time in which to worry over these possibilities, for in 1638 one did not cross the Atlantic on a modern steamship-company schedule. There were many and long delays in getting started. The outfitting was unconscionably slow, and when that was finally completed one might wait for many days for favorable winds. It was not uncommon for passengers to live on board a vessel for weeks before it sailed.

Nor were the suspicions and fears unwarranted. The apprehension aroused by the Puritan emigration had grown to real alarm in high places. Among the complaints to Laud was Maynard's, March 17, averring that such numbers of persons of good abilities had sold their lands and were departing, that divers parishes were in danger of being impoverished, and that the emigrants were taking with them so much grain that there would be hardly enough left in the country to serve till harvest. And straightway from the Council issued an order to the Lord Treasurer to detain every ship going to New England, and to put all passengers and their goods ashore. Instructions also were issued to sheriffs and other officials to seek out and hold all provisions stored with intent to ship them to America.

Picture the consternation on the serving of the Lord Treasurer's order. Their plans apparently destroyed. Compelled to quit the ship of their long-planned migration, and set ashore with the effects which represented so much sacrifice, labor, and expense. Their old homes broken up and their new home denied them.

Fortunately it was not only the emigrants who were affected. Merchants and shipowners found these emigrant voyages very profitable, the ships on their return being laden with fish from Newfoundland. The order in consequence aroused so many influential protests that the Council bowed to the storm and revoked it, setting the ships "at libertie to proced on in their intended voyage." In so doing King Charles could not refrain from slapping at those of his subjects who had chosen a home in New England rather than remain within the closer range of his benevolence, by referring to "the factious disposition of the people (or a great qte of them) in that plantation and how unfitt and unworthy they are of any support or of contenance."

With so changeable a government, one could not tell what new proclamation the next messenger might bring. It was with joy and relief that the emigrants saw the anchors raised and the ships proceed one by one down the Thames and tack slowly around the North Foreland on the first leg of their voyage to the New World.

We do not know whether or not William Ward and his family were on board one of the ships, but it is very probable that they were.

CHAPTER III

The Voyage

The emigrant ships sailed slowly seaward. Round into the Downs and through the Straits of Dover into the Channel, where contrary winds and heavy seas were wont to levy long delays and deal out the full woes and miseries of seasickness.

On past Portsmouth to drop anchor at Yarmouth, Isle of Wight, a favorite rendezvous for vessels bound to and from the Indies and many other parts of the world—traders, fishing-boats, and men-of-war.

Here the captains filled their water-casks and took on additional wood and a supply of fresh fish, the emigrants meantime enjoying themselves ashore—for most of them, the last time they were to walk on English soil. In turn was much visiting, some very formal, between shore and ship, and between the ships themselves.

Advantage was also taken of the opportunity to test the passengers at musket practise, for the sea was full of enemies, and the Turkish pirate a continual anxiety. There was a gun and a sword for every man aboard. The number of emigrant sail would spell safety at the start, but when separated by the variability of wind or ship, it might fare ill with any bark which found herself outsized by a Turk.

Even more to be feared than a real Turk was an encounter with one of the numerous English and French pirates flying the Turkish flag—or any other that suited their purpose.

Then out of Yarmouth, sailing W. by S. and W. by N. until the horizon began to immerse the Scilly Islands. As each ship witnessed the blending of land and sky, the emigrants pressing together on its poop for a last view of the Old World knew this for a fateful moment! They were full abreast the Atlantic, and, even though but started, thus measurably on their way to New England.

Now for weeks, perhaps months—for fifty days was a quick passage—the vessel under their feet will confine their whole world, severing them from the hemisphere of their forefathers and filling its sails with their lives, their hopes, and their fears.

I repeat that it is only a supposition that William Ward and his family were aboard one of the ships of the little fleet whose sailing I have chronicled, but this I will vouch—that these pages, both in what they have already told and in what follows, present a veracious picture of an emigrant voyage of the time. Every member of the family may accept it, and ponder and dream over it, as depicting the transatlantic coming of his or her first American ancestor.

It was a terribly crowded little ship for such a long voyage. Aboard were close upon a hundred and fifty souls, including the crew (who perhaps numbered thirty), and a great quantity of miscellaneous freight.

The captain, the most distinguished passengers, and some of the women and children were berthed in the cabins on each side of the big Common Cabin, or saloon, under the poop-deck; the others in cabins and (single men) in hammocks and open bunks between decks. The crew bunked in the forecastle.

The cattle, and goats and poultry, were housed in pens on the forward deck.

The ship's and passengers' stores of whole grains, meal, salt meats, peas, and other provisions were stowed in the hold. Much bulky fodder, too, for the cattle. And tools, farming implements, and household and personal effects, overflowed from the hold and filled every available square foot between decks.

On fair days, meals were enjoyed on the main and poop decks; otherwise at bench-tables in the Common Cabin and between decks.

But picture not a bugle nor a gong, and the passengers trooping down to a hot meal already prepared. The ship provided sufficient food (deputed passengers distributing it to families or groups) but she furnished her passengers with neither cooks nor stewards. Before they could enjoy a fresh-cooked meal, they must themselves cook it! Also they must wait upon themselves. Jolly enough in good weather, for the divided duties helped to while away the hours, but in bad weather and in sickness entailing not a little hardship.

The supplies furnished by the ship for the main meal, at noon, consisted generally of salt beef or pork, or cheese (salt cod or smoked herring on "fish days"), peas (or some other vegetable, as cabbage or turnips), "biscuit" (hard tack, or ship-bread, taken aboard in great quantity in barrels), and beer. Reasonably satisfying provender, but very monotonous when often repeated. No wonder that a catch of fresh fish meant a "merry feast"!

Well-informed voyagers of sufficiently full pocketbooks fared better, for they had planned to spice the ship's diet with "some comfortable refreshing of fresh victuall" from private stores of apples, lemons, prunes, preserves, biscuit of finer quality, claret, etc.—and even a few live fowls and sheep to be slaughtered aboard.

The ship's galley provided the equipment for group cooking. For the preparation of special individual and family dishes—for the stewing of prunes, or burning of claret, or frying of bacon—the passengers had brought their own skillets and frying-pans.

On stormy days no cooking at all could be done. Lucky then if anything could be got at and if one did not find that the salt water had wrought havoc in the bread-room!

The lack of fire was felt less than it would be today. A twentieth-century ocean voyage without tea or coffee would seem incredible, but those emigrants knew neither, nor drank water except under compulsion of circumstances. They enjoyed their beer instead.

A very small vessel fighting its way across a very great ocean. Day after day and night after night alone upon the face of the waters. The eight and twelve o'clock watches set with a prayer and the singing of a psalm.

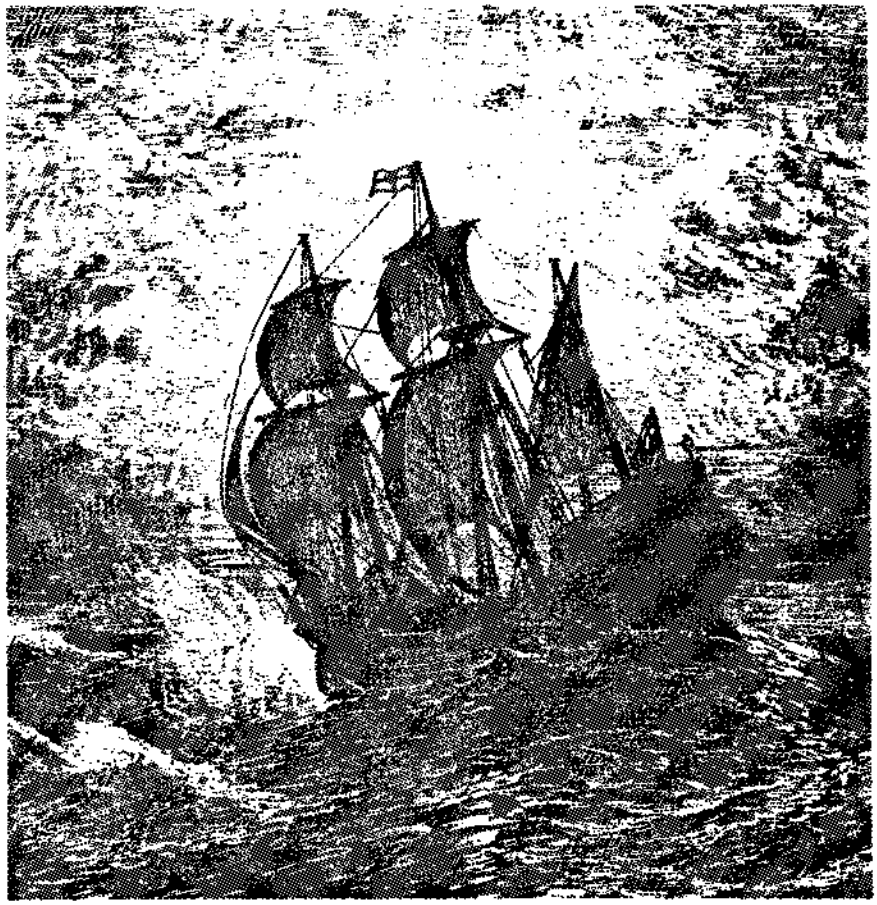

Sometimes becalmed; at others heavily buffeted by the elements. If winds were unfavorable, days were consumed where hours would now suffice. "Ten leagues a watch," seven and a half miles an hour, though not the maximum, was being "carried apace."

To the children, living actively in the present without a past to breed anxiety for the future, the long voyage was less trying than to their parents, but all the more vivid the impressions it stamped upon their minds to last throughout their lives.

'Twas a day of excitement when a sail drew eager eyes to the horizon. This might happen four or five times during the several weeks at sea. Perchance an Englishman or a Frenchman, or two or three of them together, bound for the Newfoundland fishing-banks, or a boat from Virginia or the Somers Islands (as the Bermudas were then generally styled). Perchance, also, a pirate—so feelings were mixed until a ship's identity was discerned.

With so many people closely housed, there was, inevitably, some friction, and now and then a trifle of disorderly conduct. As the case of the man who "was whipt naked at the Cap-stern, with a Cat with Nine tails, for filching 9 great Lemmons out of the Chirurgeons Cabbin, which he eat rinds and all in less than an hours time."

And that other who created a disturbance, being drunk with "strong waters" which he had stolen, and who for punishment was ducked at the main-yard's arm.

Omens were read in natural phenomena and raised hope, or spread alarm, as superstition interpreted them.

One night "a flame settled upon the main mast, it was about the bigness of a great Candle, and is called by our Seamen St. Elmo's fire. It comes before a storm, and is commonly thought to be a Spirit." A somewhat common occurrence in the days of wooden ships, an electric glow appearing at night on a ship's spars, but full of mystic significance to early mariners.

Then, a tempest to test every seagoing quality. The waves mountainous above the little vessel as she wallowed in the troughs; the sky shut off by flying foam; the decks continuously awash and the sea searching down until between-decks ran in streams. Impossible for even the experienced sailors to move about, or to stand, or to sit, or to lie, save by desperately gripping rail or rope. The waves and wind buffeting and tossing and twisting the ship until it seemed impossible that she could withstand their force.

The emigrants, with awe straining their hearts at this proof of their insignificance, humbled themselves before their Maker, glorified His power, and supplicated His assistance and protection.

Only those who have ridden through a heavy storm in a ship of the early emigrant size, 200 tons or so, can realize how vividly the experience must have impressed a company of farmers on their first voyage. It is vastly more sensational than when you have a 50,000 ton, or even a 10,000 ton, vessel challenging the elements.

When the passengers emerged on deck after the sea had subsided, they looked fully as distressed as the ship herself. They were bruised and chilled and sick from the storm's rough treatment, and from lying for many hours in wet clothes on wet bedding, their lungs poisoned by the foul air of the battened interior.

But bad weather past is quickly forgotten when skies turn fair and comfortable breezes fill the sails.

As soon as possible, bedding and clothes were brought up on deck to be dried. A peculiar looking vessel then, if onlookers there had been—with wearing apparel and blankets and mattresses spread all over her as though she were some queer ocean dry-goods market.

As the novelty of sea life wore off, many hours dragged tediously, but "ever and anon" the voyagers found instruction and delight in watching the various creatures of "the great waters": the "sea-bats," or flying-fish; the tiny carvels sailing along the surface; the big sunfish, the "porpoises," and the "mighty whales."

The whales astonished the new voyagers by their size, and excited apprehension when they "spouted water through two great holes in their heads," the water pouring down again "like a river" so that if it "should light in any Ship, she were in danger" of being "sunk down into the Sea," the water falling "with such an extream violence" as to make "the Sea to boyle like a pot, and if any Vessel be near, it sucks it in."

The most consistently entertaining of all were the "porpoises," or "herring-hogs," their antics of uproarous delight to the youngsters.

A porpoise would occasionally be harpooned and hoisted aboard. The farmer-passengers were keenly interested in the first one caught, noting that it was in size, shape, and meat a good deal like a hog.

Its flesh was cut "into thin pieces, and fryed." Opinions differed as to its desirability. Some found that it tasted "like rusty Bacon, or hung Beef, if not worse"; but they were contradicted by less captious voyagers who affirmed that, properly cooked and seasoned, it made good eating.

Among other curious sea-denizens to find their way into the skillets or kettles were occasional specimens of the flying-fish, and swordfishes and a shark or two. The flesh of the shark found little favor, but its brains were in those days prized as a great delicacy and considered a valuable medicine for women in childbirth.

Later, the voyagers marveled at the first iceberg sighted . . . "an Island of Ice . . . three leagues in length, mountain high, in form of land, with Bayes and Capes . . . and a river pouring off it into the Sea . . . two or three foxes or Devils skipping upon it."

Next were gained the famous "Banks" of Newfoundland. Heavy fogs made progress slow there but compensation was to hand in an abundance of fresh cod for little trouble in catching, and great numbers of waterfowl.

Of high interest as the vessel neared its destination was the meeting of boats with fresh tidings of New England. Happenings there, had become matters of personal concern, instead of belated far-away stories of a remote continent:

"At 4 of the clock we descryed two sail bound for New-found-land, and so for the Streights, they told us of a general Earth-quake in New England, of the Birth of a Monster at Boston, in the Massachusets-Bay a mortality."

Meat in that little batch of news for much thought, conversation, and conjecture!

Then, never to be forgotten, the first sight of the New World—stirring to a fever the hopes and ambitions which had driven the emigrants across the ocean.

Only a few hours longer, and land is finally drawn into "clear and comfortable sight," the sea-worn little ship sailing proudly along the New England coast. Seen thus, and at that season, in its happiest aspect, it fulfilled their every vision of a wondrous promised land. Water and land joined in the promise. Schools of mackerel encompassed the ship, and mainland and islands alike were rich in verdure.

As the ship lay by near Cape Ann, a few of the most favored emigrants experienced the happy adventure of actually setting foot upon the shore, bringing back ripe wild strawberries and gooseberries, and fragrant wild roses.

Cape Ann and the islands near by were early famous for wild strawberries. It is not to be doubted that the berries were trebled in delicious delicacy by the many weeks of salt meat, nor that their fresh flavor lingered forever in the memory.

Then sailing on again for the last miles of the long voyage, each moment and each detail of entrancing interest.

The panorama continued to unfold until finally our Emigrant Ship passed the narrow entrance into the "still Bay of Massachusetts" and came within view of the three hills of Old Boston—as momentous to the world's history as ever were the Seven Hills of Rome.

CHAPTER IV

The First Weeks in the New World

At the time of William Ward's arrival, Boston was only about eight years old but it had already achieved a population of a thousand or so, and it palpitated with life for it was one of the main portals through which the English race was entering a continent.

It was essentially a pioneer town. Its streets were unpaved. Its wooden buildings were interspersed with a larger number constructed mainly of clay and sod, for the peninsula offered the settlers so little timber that they were compelled to carry it by water from the harbor islands or from the mainland. There were only about thirty residences of sufficient size to command a traveler's respect.

The town centered on that part of the peninsula running back from the "Great Cove" on the east side. Its business heart was around the inner Bendall's Cove, then the chief landing-place but now for many years solid ground—part of it is the site of Faneuil Hall. Thence the twin businesses of shipping and merchandizing extended southerly to the foot of the road which is the westerly portion of the State Street of today. There were warehouses along the wharves and in their vicinity, and other warehouses and shops (of ships' and general supplies) and residences along "State Street," where also was the town's one thatched church and its whipping-post.

The thirty larger houses (including just one of brick!) were furnished much like those of the moderately well-to-do in the England of the time. They sheltered the leaders of the community, the more prosperous, the socially elect—for emigrant ships, be it remembered, carried social distinctions among the diversity of their cargoes.

Trade and traffic were far in excess of what might have been expected of the population of a thousand. Boston's position as the link connecting the colony with other parts of the world—the shipping and the continuous arrival of immigrants—furnished employment for many people and numerous business opportunities. The butcher and wine merchant, the linen draper and apothecary, the carpenter and plasterer, the tailor and shoemaker, the shipwright and blacksmith—all these callings, and numerous others, were represented.

Many sail rested in the harbor. Nearly every week during the spring and summer of that year saw one or more ships from England carrying additions to the rapidly growing population. With them lay from time to time ships trading from and with Virginia and the very young settlement of Maryland, the Dutch in New York, and the French in Canada. Occasionally also an Indian pinnace or two.

The peninsula then contained fewer than 800 acres, for this was generations before broad stretches of marsh and shallow water were filled in to serve as foundations for the building of great city streets. On the south it was joined to the mainland by the narrow extremity of a low-lying, marshy neck of ground completely submerged by high tides in the spring, Boston then becoming an island. On the north it was separated by a strip of water, about a quarter of a mile in width, from another smaller peninsula of similar contour—that later to become famous as Charlestown and for the Battle of Bunker Hill.

The Boston peninsula had very good land, "affording rich Cornefields, and fruitful Gardens; having likewise sweete and pleasant Springs," but it offered insufficient pasture, so that the inhabitants early extended their holdings to the mainland.

Ward unquestionably went "sightseeing" with his family. They traversed the crooked roads around the wharves, and walked up "State Street," stopping to gaze at Governor Winthrop's residence—the main hall of the Exchange Building now covers the site of the house he occupied in 1638. Then past the meeting-house to the market-place, and along "Washington Street," pausing to view the house in which Anne Hutchinson had lived. She was no longer there, for the opening of the spring of 1638 had seen her excommunicated and banished from Massachusetts for expounding an unorthodox "Covenant of Grace." They wandered next over the common, notable in several periods of American history—the park of today, the cow pasture of then.

Probably one fine day or another saw them follow the new "footway" over the neck to Roxbury, noting the log rails which "secured the cattle from the wolves" and the defenses to guard against Indian attacks.

In Roxbury they must have admired the further evidences of New World prosperity, for already at the time of Wood's "New England Prospect" it had become "a faire and handsome Countrey-towne; the inhabitants of it being all very rich."

Thence to Dorchester, the third of the triplet of peninsulas, the first settlement in the Massachusetts Bay, "well woodded and watered," with "very good arable grounds, and Hay-ground, faire Corne-fields, and pleasant Gardens, with Kitchin-Gardens: In this plantation is a great many Cattle, as Kine, Goats, and Swine. This plantation hath a reasonable Harbour for ships . . ." but "here is no Alewife-river, which is a great inconvenience."

When Wood wrote, Dorchester was "the greatest Towne in New England." In the few brief years that had elapsed, the palm had passed to Boston, never to be returned.

Another probable visit was to Charlestown—over the ferry, a big rowboat, at a penny a head.

Dividing interest with the country itself was its varied social, political, and religious life. The men among the immigrants mingled freely in the town "ordinary" with the colonists already established, and over their beer and cider swapped gossip from the old world for tales of the new. Ward heard the full story of the massacre of the Pequot Indians and the practical extermination of the tribe, of the turmoil that had preceded Anne Hutchinson's expulsion, and of the great earthquake; and listened to debates on the prospects of the new separate colony of Connecticut. He followed also a discussion on the possibility of taming moose to do the work of oxen, and found interest in the peculiar diversity of the money in use—the Indian shell-beads, or "wampum," loose and in strings, which passed as currency everywhere, and the musket-bullets which had taken the place of farthings.

Meantime, the family learned the diet of New England. Fish and shellfish there were in great abundance to supplement the salt pork and salt beef—lobsters that weighed thirty pounds, had fifteen-inch pincers, and a total length (with claws pulled out straight) of close upon four feet. Of novelties was Indian corn as samp, "hasty pudding," nocake, etc., in bread made of cornmeal and rye flour, and the ears plain boiled.

A dish of "corn on the cob" then was more picturesque than it is today. Yellow and white were the common colors for the ears, but these were varied not only with the red with which we are familiar but with various other hues—olive and other green tints, blue, and, black, and speckled and striped and mottled.

Milk, also, was a very important article. Bread and milk vied with mush and milk as a staple breakfast and supper dish. There were, too, "pompion" (pumpkin) and milk, and berries and milk—native whortleberries and strawberries, etc.

The "sightseeing" did not consume more than two or three days for after all there was not a great deal to see in that very new Boston of long ago—and what there was, was quickly reached by English legs well trained in walking. So Ward returned to the important task of establishing himself and his family.

Numerous choices presented themselves, for the line of civilization was spreading over the eastern part of Massachusetts by successive "swarming" from the points first settled, as ship after ship discharged its passengers and spread the rising tide of population. Before 1638 eighteen "towns," or organized groups of settlers, had achieved existence in Massachusetts Bay.

The sites most sought were those which contained a good water supply, sufficient pasture, and open land which could with the smallest amount of labor be used for the planting of grain. Timber also was an essential, but that was discussed little as it was found in nearly every part of the colony outside of Boston.

Among the most promising was the tract, named "Sudbury" in 1639, whose settlement had been projected by a number of the inhabitants of Watertown and had been approved by the colony legislature, the "General Court." It was part of the Concord River region known among the Indians as "Musketahquid," signifying "grassy ground" or "grassy brook." It adjoined Watertown (the part now Weston) on the east and the new Concord "plantation" on the north. Its attractions included the river (Sudbury River) and smaller streams traversing it, a rich acreage of pasture (or "meadow") alongside them, and open woods. Crossing the southeasterly section was the "Old Bay Path," an Indian trail which ran for hundreds of miles inland from the sea and which had already become an accepted route for settlers journeying to the Connecticut River.

CHAPTER V

Founding Sudbury, Mass.

Ward decided to join the Sudbury "plantation." Of like mind were others among the newcomers. Fresh immigrants, indeed, constituted a majority of the first settlers, from forty to fifty in number, who thus placed themselves and their families on the outskirts of civilization.

The General Court grant was intended to enclose about five miles square. As laid out, the tract fell short of this dimension, but the deficiency was made good by a second grant in 1640. The native title was obtained by purchase from the Indian "Cato" (known also as "Karte" and "Goodman").

As already noted, its territory touched that of Weston and Concord on the east and north. West and south stretched the wilderness, broken only by Indian villages.

A few wigwams stood within its boundaries. Cato dwelt with his family and retainers on "Goodman's Hill"; Tantamous, a "powwow," or medicine man, on Nobscot Hill; Nataous, or "Indian William," near Lake Cochituate. And the well-worn trails told of red men traversing the section to hunt and fish—for deer roamed and turkeys strutted through the woods; bears were at home in the highlands; and salmon, shad, pickerel, and alewives filled the river and streams. This wild food was as acceptable and nearly as important to the new white settlers as for centuries it had been to the Indians.

The streams were also a favorite habitat of muskrats and beavers, the pelts of the latter being early rated as valuable merchandise. And grouse and other game birds were plentiful in their seasons. Pigeons were so prolifically numerous that settlers could not consume all they caught. After stripping off the feathers to make mattresses they fed them to the hogs.

Permission by the General Court "to go on in their plantation" was given September 6, 1638. Many of the settlers (Ward among them?) anticipated this formal authorization and were at work with their ox-teams early in the summer, felling trees for their cabins, making rough roadways, mowing the meadows, and clearing logs and brush from patches selected for the planting of the first "common," or community, fields.

Of great moment were the first town meetings which decided on the division of lands, on the roads to be laid out, on planting questions, on fences, and on all the other problems of community life, especially pioneer community life.

Four acres was the average size of the "house-lots," or home plots, agreed upon.

The cabins of these pioneer families were small and of simple construction. A single story of whole and split logs, with two rooms at most in the beginning, with a wide log chimney covered and filled between with clay (the interstices of the walls being similarly closed), the roof of thatch, the windows of oiled paper, and the hearth of field stones.

Some of the cabins were in all probability built chiefly of clay, timber being used only for the frames; or consisted of a timber (or timber and clay) front on a home cut into a hillside.

They were mostly grouped for mutual companionship and protection, and were laid out east of the river, in the vicinity of the present Wayland Village, chiefly to its northwest and north. Twenty or more were situated in a row along the westerly side of the "Old Sudbury Road," northwesterly of its junction with Bow Road. This site was favored because of its fine stretch of level arable ground. They were not on the easterly side of Old Sudbury Road as generally stated.

Ward's house-lot was on a road long discontinued—a fork of Glezen Lane which formerly ran northerly, from about the same point that Training Field Road forks easterly, into the first easterly turn of Moore Road and thus into the road to Concord (see the map facing page 26). It was on the present Patterson farm, in the lee (the southerly side) of the first southerly slope west of the first easterly turn of Moore Road. One of its attractions was a good spring in the vicinity.

Along this same road were the house-lots of Walter Haynes and William Pelham (two of the "principal men" in the early history of the settlement), Solomon Johnson, and John Freeman.

After the cabins were roofed came the transportation from Boston and Watertown by slow two-wheel ox-drawn carts, and on horseback, of the store of food brought across the ocean, and corn and other produce purchased since arrival; and clothing, bedding, and a few pieces of furniture. With them or following them came the women and children.

For travel on later occasions when there was nothing bulky to carry, the settlers quickly adopted the Indian use of canoes and took to the rivers and streams as highways, finding this the easiest method of getting to various near-by points and, on occasion, to Boston.

Several of the settlers brought families of fair size—from five to nine children of all ages. Ward had five children, as we have already noted: John, the oldest, being in 1638 about twelve years of age; Joanna ten; Obadiah six; Richard three; and little Deborah, one.

As became pioneers, the heads of families were of active years. Only one of the newcomers from England had passed fifty. Perhaps three or four were between forty and fifty. All the others were under forty. Ward was about thirty-five.

Then came the winter. Those who have experienced the severity of a Massachusetts winter, even amidst modern conditions, may imagine how rigorous it must have seemed to those immigrants from milder England. It was no small labor even to cut the wood to feed the big open fireplaces. There were also the cattle to care for, roads to be "broken out" after a heavy snowfall (by ox-sleds and plows drawn by all available ox-teams), and (when weather permitted) the clearing of ground for cultivation in the spring, the building of wall fences, etc.

But they fought it through and by the spring of 1639 the township had been successfully founded.

CHAPTER VI

Pioneer Life in Old Massachusetts

It is probable that early in 1639 the Sudbury settlers arranged a first division of meadow ("as much as shall be thought meet") on the following plan:

"To every Mr. of a ffamylie 06 akers
"To every Wiffe 00 akers & ½
"To every childe 01 akers & ½
"to Every Mare, Cow, ox or anny other Cattle that may amount to 20 pound, or soe much monnye 3 Akers."

Only the resolution has been preserved. There is no record of such a distribution. If made, Ward was entitled to twenty acres for his family alone.

About the same time commenced allotments based upon "men's estates and abilities to improve their lands"—conditions imposed by the General Court.

"Estate" was a term frequently employed to signify a community's composite estimate of an inhabitant's resources, social position, etc. The result was variously arrived at, but the significance and intent are clear. Recognition of a settler's "estate" served as recognition both of the social precedence inbred among the colonists and of the desirability of giving the utmost opportunity for a man of means to aid in the development of a township—and such opportunity could be given only, or could best be given, by land grants.

The conjoined requirement to weigh the respective abilities of men to improve their lands is self-explanatory. The consideration was one of prime importance in pioneer days. Disregard of it was responsible for the failure of numerous early attempts at colonization.

Every original Sudbury settler received a share in each land division but the size of the shares on the "estate" basis varied greatly. The first lands thus allotted were of "meadow," and these meadow divisions were taken as a measure for future divisions of the "common land" of the original grant, and for the use of "common land" until divided.

They served also as a basis for taxation, the rates being levied in the same proportion.

Ward's allotments in the first three estate distributions of meadow were 4½, 11, and 7¾ acres, a total of 23¼ acres.* Several of the founders received considerably more, the maximum being 75 acres. A larger number received less than Ward. Several were given similar allowances.

The land being parcelled out at various times (its location within certain limits being generally decided by lot) a man's real property came to consist of a number of scattered pieces—much after the fashion of the acre and half-acre "strips" of early English villages. This gave every one representation in each section opened, but it increased the difficulties of ownership and led to numerous sales and exchanges.

Important too was the election of town officials, particularly of "selected men" to serve as executives of the township and as its informal local judiciary. Selectmen under pioneer conditions held widely diversified authority, both delegated and assumed. They were necessarily of character and standing among their associates, and generally "freemen," i.e., those who had taken the "freeman's oath."

The term "freeman" signified in Massachusetts at that date a fully qualified voter. The chief requirement was membership in a duly recognized church. Membership signified admission to the church corporation. It did not refer to attendance at worship. Everyone physically able attended church whether a member or not.

The spring and summer of 1639 saw a good many acres under cultivation and every spare moment occupied in building fences and breaking more land, both in the common planting fields and in "men's particular fields."

There was "store of plowland" but it was difficult to break up "by reason of the oaken roots . . . this kinde of land requires great strength to break up, yet brings very good crops, and lasts long without mending."

A grist-mill was built by a miller with the appropriate name of Cakebread. The community gave him 130 acres by way of encouragement. Mills did not then convert grain into the finished flour we know. Their work ended with grinding it into meal. "Bolting" the meal was a domestic duty, accomplished by means of hair or cloth sieves.

*These figures are from an original "record of the names of the inhabitants of Sudbury, with their severall quantity of meadow to every one granted according to their estates or graunted by gratulation for services rendered by them, which meadow is ratable upon all common charges." This is given in the first part of the first book of records. It bears no original date. The "1638" that some town clerk added is incorrect and has been erased. 1639 would probably be accurate for the first two divisions at all events.

At this point one may question the assumption of this genealogy that William Ward settled on the Sudbury tract in 1638, for his name does not appear on an old separate list of the first and second estate meadow divisions. The early records are too incomplete to permit deductive certainty from omissions, but they warrant the conjecture that he may have joined the settlement in 1639 or 1640, purchasing rights earlier granted. He appears on a record of "third additions," November 18, 1640.

There was a vast amount of labor to be performed.

Those who are related to families who have taken up government claims, or "quarter-sections," during this generation, know how hard has often been the struggle to establish a living competence, even though shielded from all hostiles, both red and white; though spared the loss of time and population incidental to war, and aided in many ways by improved means and conditions in agriculture. There were no government bureaus or experimental stations to serve the farmers of those days. The settlers must of their own strength and courage meet all the difficulties of opening a new country, and in addition be ever ready to insure their titles in a rain of blood. It was only the simplicity of their lives that rendered possible the comfortable prosperity which followed their efforts.

There was the important mitigation that much of their toil was in neighborly companionship. There was little of the lonely isolation that weighed on the later pioneers of the western states. "Rich" or poor, they labored at similar tasks and often side by side, and they all owned a share in the constructive pride of seeing a new township take form as the result of their toil.

Community obligations, too, were equitably divided. The richer the man's stake in the district—not only the higher the rates he paid, but also the more community labor expected of him. An early order required all inhabitants to "come forth to the mending of the great road" upon a summons by the surveyor: the "poorest men" to work one day; the others to work a day for every six acres of meadow owned.

A church was organized in 1640 (with, of course, Congregational form and Calvinistic creed), the Reverend Edmund Brown being engaged as pastor. His salary for his initial year was £40, half in cash and half in produce.

He must have held services in the cabins during his first winters, for work on the meeting-house was not commenced until 1643.

This first meeting-house stood in the "Old Burying-ground" which abuts on the Old Sudbury Road near Wayland Village. It was perhaps set a little back of the supposed site which is marked by a slight embankment and a granite-imbedded bronze marker. It stood across the highway from the row of twenty or more house-lots mentioned on page 25.

Opposite is a reduced facsimile of the contract for its construction, William Ward being one of the six men who signed for the township.*

This document is of the highest interest to his descendants, for with it he steps out of the haze which obscures his prior life, and assumes definite form visioned in the mirror of his associates, and of his and their acts.

What type of man was he? Of what character and what circumstances?

Apparently he was not one of the few (comparatively) well-to-do among the Sudbury founders. It has already been noted that the meadow divisions "by men's estates" gave a number of settlers land considerably in excess of his allotment. In the table of the "third additions" of 1640, twenty-two of the forty-nine inhabitants named were given substantially more than Ward—some of them very much more—and only five received appreciably less. His worldly possessions were evidently not such as to accord him special preference.†

But he was just as evidently a man whose character and personality impressed the community, or he would not appear as one of the six chosen to represent it in the meeting-house contract. The five others were all "freemen," and three of them were of those of especially high rating by "estates." Ward was the only one of the six neither well-to-do nor a freeman.

The erection of the meeting-house frame took place in May, 1643. Every man in the settlement was on hand to help, for "raising time" was a jolly occasion in Old New England, with plenty of substantial food and inspiriting beverages to stimulate and reward the workers.

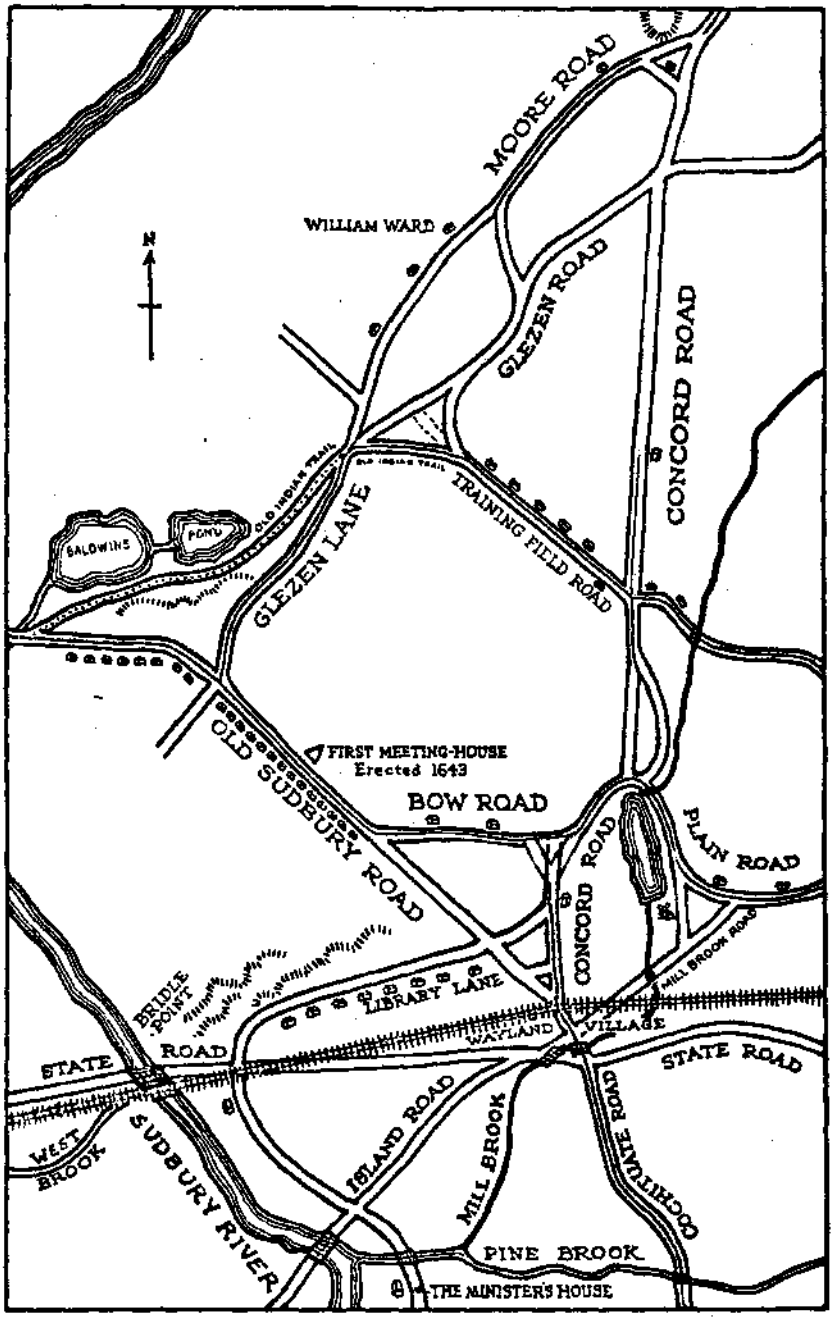

The completed meeting-house was only a rough, raftered building, 20 x 30 feet in size, with plain wooden benches and sanded floor, but it served as a veritable social and political center. It was in many respects a replica of the English parish church as it had been prior to the time of Laud.

At the drum-beat signal, the inhabitants gathered to it every Sunday morning, each taking the seat assigned to him (its position denoted his standing in the community) to profit by the minister's long sermon

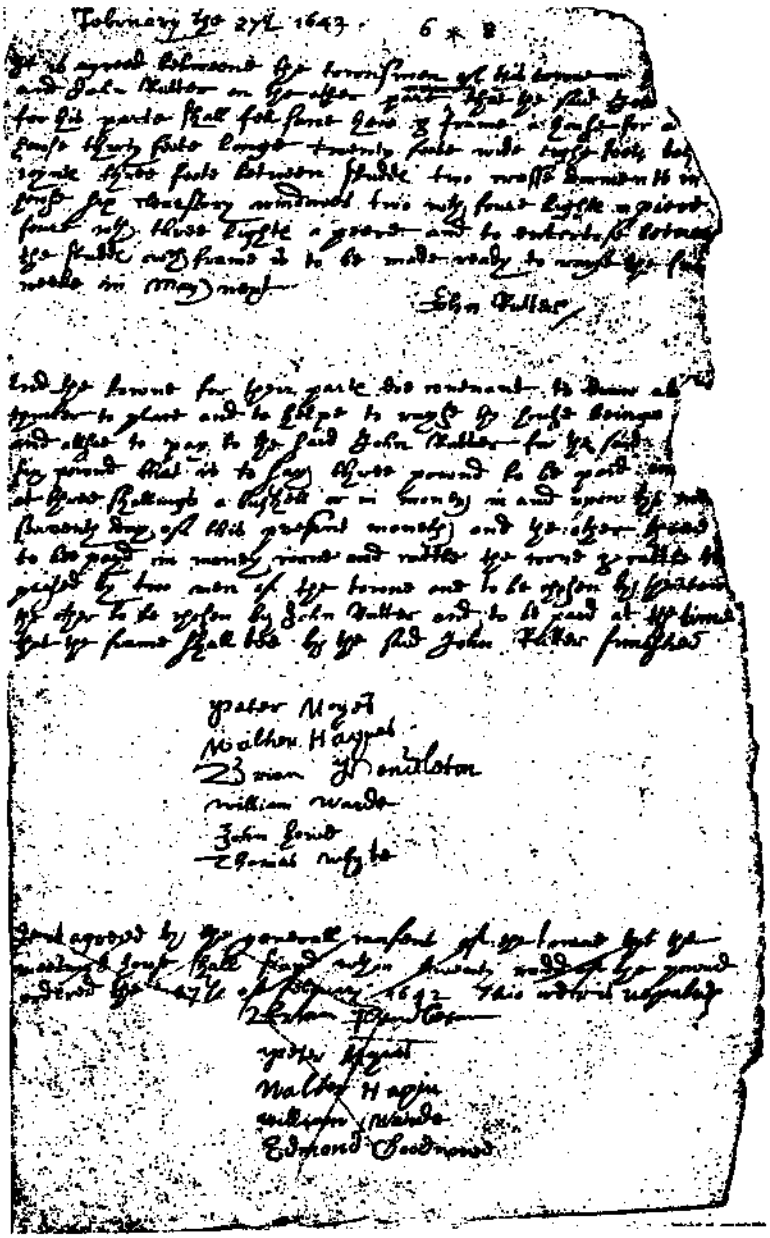

* It will be observed that in the church contract Ward's surname appears as "Warde." As noted on page 3 he was known by both styles during his first years in Massachusetts. The two spellings were, in general use, long practically interchangeable. Some of his twentieth-century descendants have re-adopted the "e."

The original writing of the date "1642" for a contract made in 1648 is a reminder that the ecclesiastical and legal year then commenced on the twenty-fifth of March, instead of the January 1st of the historical year. On the upper date line the "2" was changed to a "3." The date on the cancelled clause at the foot of the page remains clearly "1642."

† His house-lot has been given as 20 acres, much larger than the average, but that tract included "a second addition which he bought of Edmund Rice."

and fervid exhortations, and to take part in the singing of psalms from the "Bay Psalm Book," now known as the "Old Bay Psalm Book" but then a very new volume, published only three years before and the first book (save an almanac, if that be a book) printed in English America.

On occasion also, as the years went by, the confession of doctrinal or moral sins by members, and once in a while testimony, or "prophecy," by visitors.

Long, long services. In winter, a severe test of the physical endurance of both minister and congregation, for no fire was allowed to temper the freezing atmosphere. Nor much less a trial on torrid summer days. But in contrast the more enjoyable was the noon intermission in one or other of the near-by houses, there to refresh both with food and drink and with welcome social intercourse.

The community life revolving around the meeting-house was much fuller and much brighter than has generally been depicted. Banish the idea of somberness. It does not fit a crowd of men and women of kindred interests, chatting over their beer, cider, or rum, with the rough jocosity and wide freedom of those times—a community furthermore which knew its neighbors most intimately—so well that every happening found its reflection in another's, or many others', experience. They probably derived at least as much pleasure from their broad jokes and neighborly converse as the modern family does from its afternoon at the movies, unless the show is very good indeed!

The Boston artisan and shop-clerk felt sadly cramped, and frequently and variously rebelled at Sabbath restrictions—and children and youths of communities of all sizes were restless under the repression of their inherent activity—but strict "Lord's Day" observance was not considered irksome by the adults of the farming lands. If (being a man) you work hard all the week in the open air, or if (being a woman) you are continuously busy during six days at the spinning-wheel and with cooking, washing, and cleaning, it is not much of a punishment to sit restfully down in the company of your neighbors and listen to, or doze through, even the longest sermon, except the weather be extreme. Golf was not for the men of those families. After following the plow, or building stone fences for six days in a week, they would have found no zest in pursuing a little ball over their pastures on the Seventh. And motoring in its colonial forms of driving and riding lacked both novelty and pleasurable roads.

Even their costumes! Whence came the tradition of a drab Puritan?

They had not left all vanities behind them in the Old Country. The women particularly, but not exclusively, were much given to "slashed clothes" and lace and embroidery. So strong indeed was the love of dress and display that numerous laws were passed to curb the "great supfluores and unnecessary expences" occasioned both by "newe and immodest fashions" and by the "ordinary weareing" of lace, and gold and silver girdles, etc. And a crowd of men of the twentieth century would feel themselves the very reverse of somberly attired if decked out with green and red waistcoats, enlivened with a sprinkling of red caps, and perhaps "ruffs" and some gold or silver lace. Yet so were our colonists clothed.

The meeting-house was, furthermore, made to pay its way by various other general uses. It served as a proud new place for the town meetings which ruled the miniature republic, the meetings now opened with a prayer by Pastor Brown. Presently, too, it drew the inhabitants for the Thursday "lecture."

Also within its walls was stored the community's reserve supply of gunpowder—a dire essential, for William Ward's Sudbury was not the sheltered village of later generations. Over its "50 or 60 families" with "about 80 souls in Church fellowship," always hung the possibility of a life and death struggle with the aborigines. No Indian trouble of any magnitude had disturbed the immigrants who arrived after the Pequot War, but the "red danger" was no imaginary fear as everyone was to learn in after years.

The need of constant vigilance was fully recognized by the provincial deputies. Every township was required to organize and drill its "train-band," or militia company, to keep a stated reserve of gunpowder, to agree upon alarm signals, and to arrange a safe retreat for women and children.

Also at various times the General Court ordered the sending out of "carefull and dayly skouts for the rainginge of the woods upon the borders" of the towns and in 1645 (just two years after Sudbury raised its meeting-house) came instructions "by reason of the psent warre with the Indians," to have part of their "souldiers" ready to march at "halfe an houres warning." Thus early we find the idea that a hundred and thirty years later produced the Minute-Men of the Revolution!

It was not sufficient that every able-bodied man belong to his township train-band. On May 14, 1645, the General Court advised the training of boys in the use of both bow and arrow and firearms:

From a photograph by Alfred W. Cutting

As the trail looks today. It is only a few minutes walk from the site of the house-lot of William Ward, his home from 1638 to 1661.

"Whereas it is conceived yt ye training up of youth to ye art & practice of armes wilbe of great use in ys country in divers respects, & amonge ye rest yt ye use of bowes & arrows may be of good concernmt, in defect of powder, upon any occasion it is therefore ordered, yt all youth wthin this iurisdiction, from ten yeares ould to ye age of sixeteen yeares, shalbe instructed, by some one of ye officrs of ye band, or some othr experienced souldier whom ye chiefe officer shall appoint, upon ye usuall training dayes, in ye exercise of armes, as small guns, halfe pikes, bowes & arrowes, &c, according to ye discretion of ye said officer or souldier, pvided yt no child shalbe taken to ys exrcise against yir parents minds; ys ordr to be of force wthin one month after ye publication hereof."

So we must picture young Obadiah, then thirteen, and Richard, ten, practising on the Common, supplementing the martial preparations of father William and big brother John.

This, too, was an echo of old-country memories, for it had been the custom in Southampton and other exposed English coast-towns to require all children, commencing with the age of seven, to practise archery as a measure of public protection.

Sudbury's position was considered so precarious that the same General Court forbade any emigration from the township save by special permit:

"In regard of the great danger that Concord, Sudberry, and Dedham wilbe exposed unto, being inland townes & but thinly peopled, it is ordered, that no man now inhabiting & settleed in any of the said townes (whither married or single) shall remove to any other towne without the allowance of a magistrate, or other select men of that towne."

On May 10, 1643, Ward became a "freeman" and thus secured the right of full suffrage and eligibility to all political positions.

The following spring, he was elected the township deputy, or representative, to the General Court.

The term in which he took part was the first in which the Deputies and Assistants (or Magistrates) had sat as separate bodies, a result generally credited to the famous fight between a "rich man" and the "poor widow Sherman" over a stray sow.

Ward's first legislative duty was on a committee appointed June 7 to examine a revision of the colonial laws submitted by ex-Governor Bellingham "and returne theire objections & thaughts thereof to this howse in wrighteinge."

The next year (1645) he was, together with Peter Noyes and Walter Haynes, appointed a commissioner "to end small causes" in Sudbury. Which appointment was repeated in 1646, with William Pelham and Edmund Rice as associates.

He served also for several years as chairman of Sudbury's selectmen and represented his community on the grand jury of the county court at Charlestown and Cambridge.

His holdings, too, increased by division of the township lands, by occasional purchase, and by "gratulation," i.e., by grants from the township for special services rendered. A particularly large dividend came at the division in 1651 of a new colony grant, two miles wide, the length of the western boundary of the township. This time every proprietor shared alike, 130 acres each, the locations being decided by lot. Ward's total holdings thus rose to between two and three hundred acres. The change of hemisphere had been well rewarded.

The colony likewise had proved its strength and vitality, standing firmly now on its own feet. The tide of immigration had stopped. Other colonies chiefly attracted those who left the old country—emigrants found life easier in the West Indies. The development of the Massachusetts which was later to challenge the mother country was left to the descendants of the original settlers who had carved homes out of its wilderness.

The change had brought a commercial crisis to Massachusetts but she had weathered it and worked out her salvation in her own way, greatly increasing as a substitute her ship-carried barter and trade, especially with the West Indies. She fought her own fight through the crisis, entirely unaided by the mother country, but also undisturbed by it, for King Charles was too busily engaged to interfere, too thoroughly occupied with efforts to retain the crown slipping from his head.

CHAPTER VII

Policies and Suffrage in Old Massachusetts

The cardinal policies that quickly developed in the Massachusetts commonwealth were practical independence for the colony, identity of church and state, and intolerance of all "unorthodox" religions.

Bearing on the first point, the "foreign policy" of the Massachusetts Bay pioneers is easily summed up in the determination of their leaders to resist any interference with their methods of self-government and the charter upon which they based and built their rights—or claims. An appeal to England was considered an act of treason, to be thwarted by any means—by exile, imprisonment, or death; and the chief necessity, an undivided front opposed to all attempts of the English government, secular or religious, to extend its control. Firmly set was their intent to establish their own plans and ideas of government upon the virgin soil that fate and themselves had given into their keeping.

Equally emphasized is the identity of church and state. The colonial government soon came under the potential control of the people by the annual election of the governor, assistants, deputies, military officers, etc., but complete suffrage was (as already noted) early limited to church members. Until 1664 only "freemen" could vote for governor, assistants, or deputies, or fill such offices, and only freemen could hold military rank. And commencing with 1631 only members of orthodox Congregational churches were eligible for the freeman's oath. From 1635 to 1647 there existed also a law to debar nonfreemen from holding township positions and rendering them ineligible to vote on town matters of importance.

A considerable proportion of the adult males of 1638 were freemen, but various circumstances, chiefly creed dissensions and restrictions, resulted until 1664 in a decreasing percentage of inhabitants who could, or would, qualify by accepting orthodox covenants. It is estimated that only one in five or one in six were freemen in 1664.

These statements may suggest, as has often been stated, that a majority of the inhabitants were politically inarticulate. Under Massachusetts conditions the practical result was very far from anything of the sort. In the country townships (i.e., throughout the greater part of the colony) non-freemen largely disregarded legislative restrictions and took an active and official part in the management of their communities;* and local opinion was so vital a force that there seems no reason to doubt that the inhabitants of Massachusetts would have compelled the annulment of the church membership qualification if there had been any deep general dissatisfaction with it, or if legislation or executive authority had shown itself inimical to the material rights of those not enfranchised. Had there been an attempt to withhold suffrage against public opinion, the Massachusetts Bay men could have taken it by pressure of numbers, as the freemen took the reins of government from the unwilling hands of those "principal men" in whom, its temporary possessors, it had commenced to crystallize.

It should further be noted for its influence on public sentiment that, within the church membership, suffrage was free to all men, poor or well-to-do. This gave full voting power to poor men who were disbarred when property qualifications were substituted.

The restriction of suffrage gave to the colony leaders very real power over religious professions and observances so long as they could hold the support of the freemen, because those outside the pale were divided or indifferent, but no autocratic pretension on secular subjects could have existed.

The orthodox hierarchy mimicked the practises of the religious authorities in England and played the part of Laud against dissentients —the jealousy and dissatisfaction it aroused accelerated the colonization of Rhode Island and Connecticut—but in material points there was no similarity to the conditions which had stimulated emigration from England. There was no arbitrary taxation, no official corruption, no autocratic irremovable government.

The distribution of land is an all-important factor in the opening of a new country. The average man's immediate interest was much more intimately affected by the division of township territory than by the lack of a vote for an Assistant or a Deputy.

The Massachusetts settlers came from a country of landlords and tenants, both classes being represented in the migration, but on the new soil everyone who took part in the settlement of a township shared

* The law of 1635 referred to on page 35 was ignored in the case of Sudbury both by the settlers and by the General Court itself. The legislature had specifically debarred non-freemen from any vote concerning the "laysing out of lotts, &c.," yet only two of the seven Sudbury men that it commissioned, September 4, 1639, to "lay out lands" were freemen at that time; and, as already noted, Ward was not a freeman when he was appointed to sign for the town.

in the division of its lands, irrespective of his suffrage qualifications or lack of them. The size of a family and its financial resources, social rank, and other considerations were influential in determining the size of allotments, but suffrage qualifications accorded no preference whatever.

No great discernment is required to perceive the weakness and dangers of the theory of the church membership restriction, but it draws more indignation from modern writers than it did from those who lived and toiled and hoped and built within its shadow. It was not as a rule sensed as oppressive except by some residents of the older towns, as Boston and the vicinity. Those in the newer settlements had their minds and hands very full in the establishment and operation of their communities.

Full suffrage was indeed a duty frequently evaded by those eligible—to such an extent that the General Court of 1647 passed a law with penalties for those "many membrs of churches, who, to exempt ymselves from all publike service in ye common wealth, will not come in to be made freemen."

It seems to me that altogether too much has been made of the early restriction of suffrage in Massachusetts. Many of those entitled to the privilege, did not want it; and those not entitled to it, could have obtained it if they had made a general demand for it.

Also, a wrong perspective is attained by historians who recite the history of Boston as that of Massachusetts. Too much space is accorded to controversies and other happenings in the capital. It was to a large degree the development of the hinterland that made Massachusetts great.

On the last of the three points cited at the commencement of this chapter—religious intolerance—one finds, on the other hand, ample evidence to sustain the modern indictment against the leaders of the first generations. Some of them aggressively and others with lingering unwillingness set from themselves the light they had earlier held for freedom of religious exercise; and for this the entire enrolled body of freemen—holding in their power the election of governor, assistants, and deputies, and themselves "settling" the clergy—must bear their share of responsibility.

The intolerant spirit which animated the freemen and clergy in 1637—the setting aside of Vane as the result of the Anne Hutchinson religious excitement, and the edicts of the famous Synod—was indeed representative of the trend of Massachusetts thought. A dispute over, or the non-acceptance of, a doctrinal point was a very serious matter. Local histories tell of many community quarrels and dissensions over ambiguous, gossamered theological tenets, and the political happenings of the summer of 1637 prove that the policy pursued was at the time the general wish of Massachusetts outside of Boston.

Furthermore, though, as decades went by, the freemen shrank to a small minority, the orthodox church party always probably constituted an active plurality, for dissentients presented a very wide variety of indifference and division.

There are many other interesting sides to the subject:

The idea of a theocracy built upon the Old Testament was strongly held by many of the early settlers. The manner of the colony inception favored the idea of a proprietary community. The "principal men" believed that the safety of the new commonwealth lay in its continuing as much as possible under their personal control—and the delicacy of the political connections between Massachusetts Bay and the old country constantly excited the fear that any schism or dissension that was not crushed or smothered might destroy the power which they exercised by virtue of charter, precedent, and personality, or might develop into a cause or pretext for royal interference. Some of the clergy were autocratic but they had been placed in their offices by virtue of the trust felt in them by their congregations—they were not appointed by any king, bishop, or individual patron. They were respected for their learning and they stood in the forefront of the spirit of independence.

To ascribe to Massachusetts' suffrage and religious restrictions the cessation of immigration from England is an unreasonable stretching of the indictment. Neither one, nor both together, would have sufficed if economic conditions had equaled or exceeded the apparent promise of other colonies. The majority of those who emigrated from England were not so self-sacrificingly devoted to religious tenets nor so accustomed to suffrage privileges or rights. It will be remembered that immigration was not resumed when religious restrictions were removed.

It would, truly, have made a handsomer historical picture if Massachusetts had from the first both accepted and practised the theory of religious tolerance, but there is enough glory for her in that she held steadily burning the light of abundant opportunity for the development of prosperous family life. In that respect she was infinitely in advance of the mother country, which was instead steadily cramping her citizenry.

POLICIES AND SUFFRAGE IN OLD MASSACHUSETTS

William Ward's Political Views

Of this New England party of secular opportunity and religious intolerance was William Ward. He was early prominent among the lay members of his church, and he was after May 1643 a fully accredited freeman. Beyond these general facts we lack sufficient information to determine his personal views. Massachusetts policies had set before his arrival, and during its first decades Sudbury was blessedly free from church disputes, its inhabitants living together in "godly peace and unity."

A number of Ward's associates were quicker than he in enrolling as freemen. Was he a full-fledged church member (and therefore entitled to take the oath) prior to 1643? There is nothing to decide this. Did he become a freeman because he wanted to be a deputy? He was elected the following year. Or had he refrained from becoming one, because he did not want to be a deputy or to have other additional responsibilities?

CHAPTER VIII

Founding a Second Township

Seventeen years have passed since the founding of Sudbury. In Old England, King Charles has been beheaded and Oliver Cromwell rules as Lord Protector. In New England, one finds the pioneer settlements developing into an overseas nation, already with a population of nearly fifty thousand, more than half of it in Massachusetts.

Boston, with three to four thousand inhabitants, has grown to the stature of a famous seaport. She is busy with shipbuilding, and craft engaged in fishing, and trading in fish and lumber and other commodities. She deals much with the other colonies, and is the chief market of the West Indies. Her ships ply freely across the Atlantic also, trafficking both with England and with other European countries. The milestones of pioneer conditions have been left so far behind that they are well nigh forgotten. Several more brick buildings have made their appearance. There is a noticeable showing of the luxuries of life.

In contrast are other conditions difficult to visualize. New York, for example, is still a little town of fewer than a thousand inhabitants. Though easily accessible from Boston by water, it is, overland, separated by a hard two weeks or more of riding, part of the way through virgin forests. You can go today from New York to Japan nearly as quickly, and with much less discomfort. Another eighteen years is to pass before the first post carries letters between the two towns, and even then it is to prove a plan too far advanced for the times and to be soon abandoned.

The flight of time has dealt kindly with the Sudbury settlement. Herds have multiplied until the neat cattle alone total several hundred, and households have added comforts impossible during the first few years. Ward's family has been increased by seven children—a total now of seven sons and five daughters.

But the knowledge that every year added to the number of their children attaining marriageable age and ready to establish their own homes, raised a new problem in the minds of the Sudbury proprietors.

The township which had at first appeared so spacious, now seemed too small.

It is true that its territory of thirty-five square miles contained only about seventy-five families, and one may be inclined to smile at their assertion that they were cramped, but the conditions of those days were not the conditions of twentieth-century Massachusetts, nor their needs our needs. Their principal wealth, apart from their lands, was in cattle, and a plentiful supply of natural mowing ground and pasture was to them essential.

About 1650 John had married Hannah Jackson and had settled in Cambridge (that part now Newton). With his exception, all the members of the family set their thoughts on the virgin lands of the province, and Ward with various other representative men of Sudbury took many a prospecting trip "to view the country."

They finally decided (in 1655 or early in 1656) on "a place which lyeth westward about eight miles from Sudbury" which they conceived might be "comfortable for their subsistence," and promptly on the convening of the General Court at Boston in May, 1656, they presented their petition for authority to establish a "plantation" there, stating that they were "so streightned" for land for their stock.. "God haveing given us some considerable quantity of Cattle".. that they could not "so comfortably subsist as could be desired."... That "God hath been pleased to increase our Children, which are now divers of them growne to man's Estate; & wee, many of us, growne into years, so as that wee should bee glad to see them setled before ye Lord take us away from hence."

Ward and twelve others were the signatories. All but one of them were members, or sons of members, of the earliest roll of Sudbury pioneers.

The General Court granted the request without hesitation or demur. The Sudbury record of the petitioners was ample guarantee of their ability to establish a new settlement. They were accorded "a proportion of land sixe miles square, or otherwise in some convenient forme equivalent thereunto, at ye discretion of ye Committee, in ye place desired; provided it hinder no former Graunt; and that there bee a Towne settled with Twenty or more families within three years, so as an Able Ministry may be there maintained."

It was later found that the grant conflicted with one given to a group of "Praying Indians." This difficulty was overcome by setting off 6000 acres for an Indian Plantation, the founders receiving compensation in other adjacent unoccupied land. The grant also overlapped private concessions, but the disputes were adjusted.*

Then came plans for land divisions, and a careful consideration of the possibilities of the new township, which was variously known at this stage as Ockoocangansett, Whipsufferadge, and Whipsuppenicke.

The founders discarded the comparatively compact, central-village style of Sudbury. The house-lots they laid out averaged much larger—from sixteen to fifty acres—and their homes were consequently further apart. This was a few years later to make the settlement an easy prey for Indians.

Also unlike Sudbury, the size of the house-lots was determined by the "estate" standing of the settlers. All later land divisions were in proportion to them, and all public charges were assessed by the same measure.

Three men were recognized by their estate standing as the most prominent in the new community. Each was accorded a fifty-acre house-lot. Ward was one of the three.

Two of his sons also participated: Obadiah, then twenty-five years of age, received a house-lot of twenty-one acres, and Richard, twenty-two years old, a house-lot of eighteen acres. (The ages given are of 1657.)

It was agreed that all the proprietors must "themselves . . . bee resident" in the township "within two yeares time, or sett a man in that ye Towne shall approve of, or els to loose theire lotts"; and Ward, Thomas King, John Ruddocke, and John Howe were chosen to put its affairs "in an orderly way."

Among their first acts was the "settling" of a minister, the Reverend William Brimsmead, a very worthy man but said to have been so strict a Sabbatarian that he refused to baptize children who had been so indiscreet as to come into the world on Sunday. Pastor Brimsmead was given a plot of thirty acres.

The successful launching of the project with its opportunity for new homes had been quickly followed by two marriages in the Ward household. Hannah married Abraham How of Watertown in the early spring of 1657, and Deborah was united in the fall to John, son of Solomon Johnson, who had been the Wards' nearest neighbor in Sudbury until his removal to Watertown in 1652, following the sale of

* A survey of the township made in 1667 shows an area of 29,419 acres instead of the six miles square of the original grant. his house-lot and other near-by plots to William Ward. Abraham was accorded a twenty-five acre house-lot in Marlborough and John received thirty acres, the small difference probably constituting an allowance for a poor stretch of ground, or to encompass a spring, or for other reasons of location.

The most energetic men of the new township—which included Ward, for his name is found on orders urging speedier action in making improvements and laying penalties for neglect to do so—had their lots "perfected," and some had houses built and their families installed in them by or before 1659. Others were slower—a fact which caused much ill-feeling and later raised a hornet's nest of disputes and community squabbles.

Drastic action was threatened at a town-meeting held in December, 1659. It was resolved:

> That all such as lay clayme to any Interest in this new Plantation at Whipsufferadge are to perfect their House Lotts by the five & twentieth of March next insueing or els to loose all theire Interest in the fforesaid Plantation."
> It is also ordered That every one that hath A Lott in ye foresd Plantation shall pay Twenty Shillings by ye ffive & twentieth of March next ensueing or els to loose all theire Interest in the fforesaid Plantation."

On June 12, 1660 (May 31, Old Style) the General Court confirmed the plantation grant and named it "Marlborow."

This was followed by the town's confirmation and record of the house-lots laid out and by its first division of meadow. The number of proprietors had by this time increased to thirty-eight.

The settlers avoided to some extent Sudbury's ownership of scattered outlying pieces of pasture and arable land by so ordering the first division of meadow and the second division of upland that each man's shares lay "most convenient" to his "Habitation."

Some of the Wards were early in Marlborough. William Ward himself moved there for good in the early spring of 1661.

The family constituted quite a colony in itself. There were father William "of Sudbury" and mother Elizabeth; their four big sons—Obadiah, twenty-nine years old, Richard, twenty-six, Samuel, nineteen, and Increase, sixteen; Elizabeth, a girl of eighteen, and Hopestill, of fourteen; and three children—William, twelve; Eleazer, eleven; and Bethiah, two. With them came one of the three married daughters, Deborah Johnson. Hannah How joined them soon after. The records are incomplete so we cannot tell how many children the married daughters brought with them, but Hannah had three at all events.

Only John and Joanna were missing. Joanna had married Abraham

Williams and lived in Cambridge. One other defection came in the fall when Richard married Mary Moores of Sudbury and returned there, his Marlborough grant reverting to Samuel. The loss was balanced later by Joanna and her husband and a child or two joining the plantation.

Richard's marriage was followed in a few months by the marriage of Elizabeth to John Howe, Jr., son of John Howe—the latter, like Ward, being one of the founders of both Sudbury and Marlborough.

The total number of residents, including children, was about a hundred.

Ward's big house-lot was excellently situated. Its northeast corner faced the settlement's first meeting-house, soon after erected, and the town's main road was laid out to run along its northern boundary. Opposite, across the main road, west of the meeting-house, was the minister's plot.

The meeting-house was built just within the southerly end of the Indian planting-field before title to its site had been secured, and the purchase of the site from an Indian by the name of Anamaks provided only a bare ten feet of ground around the building, so Ward deeded to the town about half an acre of that part of his house-lot directly opposite.

The town "gratefully accepted" and ordered

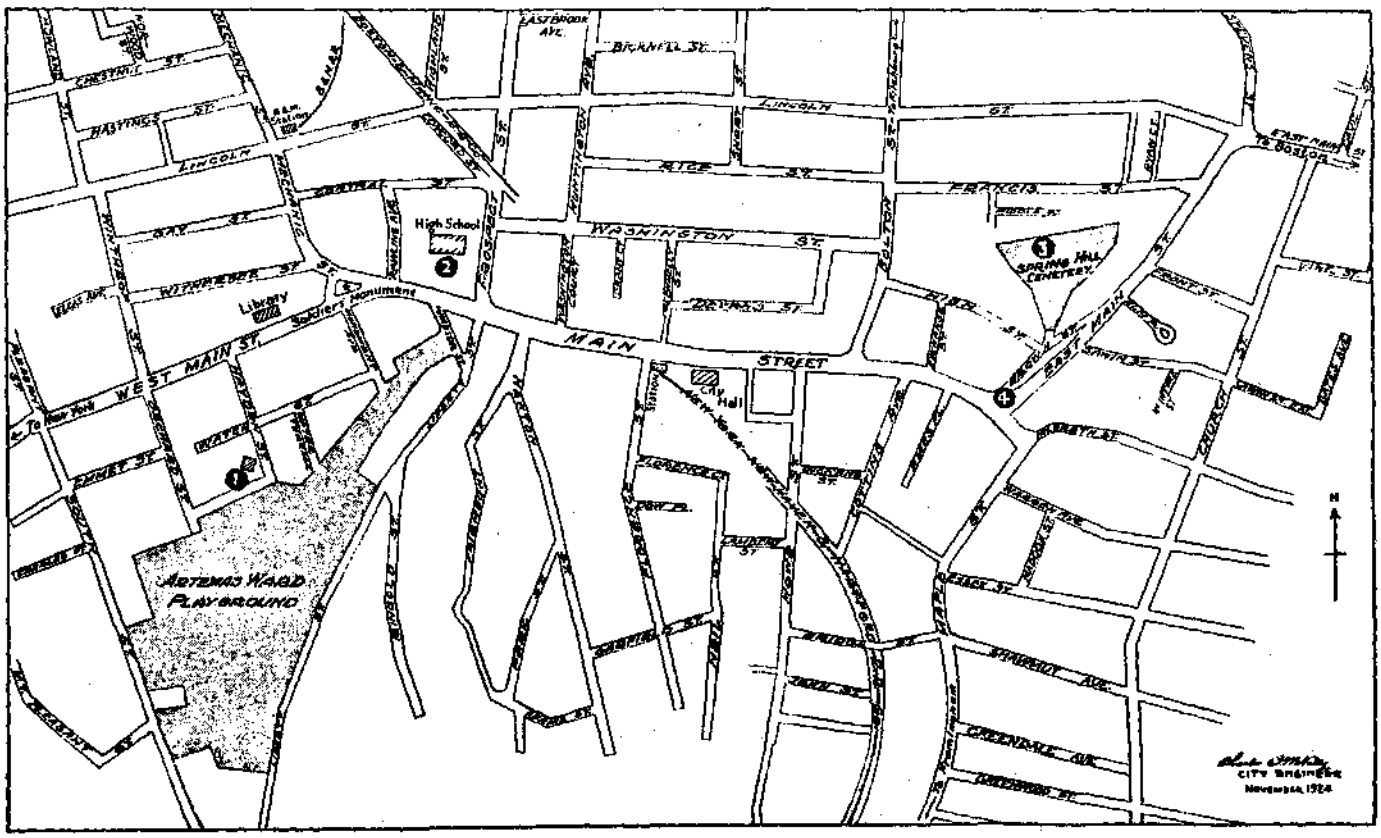

"first yt the sd William Ward shall have liberty to cutt & carry away all the wood & timber that is uppon ye same: 2ly That hee shall bee satisfyed to his content in any other part of the Towne (not yett granted) in liew thereof: & 3ly it is ordrd that this peice of Land now by him surrendred into the Towns hands as before sd shall lye for A perpetuall common or Highway not to bee taken upp by any, or othrwaise disposed of, without the consent of every Proprietor that hath Towne Rights."

This plot is part of the present High School Common.

The house that Ward built was near the end of the present Hayden Street, a few steps from the library, where the home of Mr. John E. Hayes now stands (see the map opposite). Its site was selected because of an abundant spring near by.

A much more commodious dwelling it was than the first log cabin in Sudbury. Similar rough-hewn logs formed its frame, but it was shingle-roofed, clapboarded outside, and boarded within, contained several rooms, and had a cellar.

The fields behind are now Marlborough property and are being converted into the town's fine new recreation center—with running track, football gridiron, baseball diamonds, &c.—named "The Artemas Ward Playground" in joint memory of General Artemas Ward, the great-grandson of William Ward, and of his great-grandson and namesake, Mr. Artemas Ward, the publisher of this volume.

As would be expected, Ward was prominent in Marlborough affairs. He was continuously a selectman, and a deacon of the church from the time of its organization, and his house was frequently chosen for the midweek meetings which became a feature of the township's religious life.

The deacons constituted a general committee for the management of church affairs and to assist the minister in his duties, one of them taking his place when he was ill or absent. During divine service they sat in a special pew near the pulpit.

Ward probably held other township offices, but the records from 1665 to 1739 disappeared many years ago.

He was also frequently elected to represent Marlborough on the county grand jury, and in 1666 was again in Boston as a deputy.

The years which had seen the confirmation of the new home of the Ward family and their removal thither, gave birth also to happenings of wide significance on both sides of the ocean—the passing of the friendly Cromwell government on the triumphant return of Charles II, and the death of Massasoit, the first influential Indian friend of the white man in New England.

The restoration of the Stuart monarchy gravely imperilled the practical independence which Massachusetts had arrogated to herself, for popular revulsion had suffocated Puritanism in England and there remained no widespread or effective sympathy with her aims.

Numerous charges lay against the colony: her encroachments northward in territory claimed by heirs of Gorges and Mason; her limitation of the suffrage; her frequent assumption of the place of source in allegiance, laws, and writs; her protection of the regicides; her disputes with other colonies; and her disregard of the Navigation Acts designed to control the trade of the empire.

Many of the London merchants who had hitherto held their influence in favor of New England, now turned their faces away—in jealousy of the trade that Massachusetts was doing with other countries in violation of the Navigation Acts.

To meet these conditions was no longer an undivided front. Puritanism retained ascendency in the colony but observers could note the rising of the "English party" tide. The older towns had developed a crop of well-to-do families who leaned rather towards England and memories or dreams of its wider social life than to the young commonwealth rising directly around them. And others, though colonial in thought, were afraid to risk their worldly goods in controversy with Great Britain.

The politically dissatisfied, also, knew that their appeals against Congregational rule would now fall on willing ears.

Massachusetts, however, "avoided and protracted" and—aided by English local conditions, Charles's personal pursuits, and the Dutch wars—was able to postpone the issue.

The establishment of Marlborough involved the same problems of settlement and the same labor in highways, fencing, and other public improvements as had the development of Sudbury. The experience that the latter township had given should have made the new project progress smoothly, but there was a lack of the harmony which had marked Sudbury's pioneer days. Factional fights divided the inhabitants—with accusations and counter-charges over the failure, or alleged failure, to pay rates and perform allotted tasks, and quarrels over numerous other matters.

The disputes extended into religious matters and kept the entire community in a turmoil. A minister had quickly been chosen and a meeting-house was erected in 1662–1663, but no "church" was organized until 1666, the congregation still continuing to be officially of Sudbury.

Reference has already been made to the warning of December 1659 that delinquents must pay their assessments and perfect their house-lots by the following March or lose their rights in the settlement. The next September those who had failed to pay their rates were threatened with a similar penalty. In October of 1661 it was voted that only those who had perfected their house-lots should participate in the second division of upland and that others should, further, be subject to a tax of twelve pence for every acre not laid out. In November of the following year it was ordered that those who had not settled on their house-lots and had not paid rates "according to their full proportion," should "have ye Lotts they lay claime to seized and distrained for the use of ye Towne."

When some, whether from inability or unwillingness, still did not pay their rates the authorities attempted to enforce the forfeiture penalty. A long fight followed, the delinquents appealing to the General Court, and the latter sending a committee to investigate conditions.

The committee reported (1663) that, in the event of forfeiture, the town should reimburse those dispossessed for all improvements made. To meet the criticism that orders and penalties were issued and inflicted without sufficient notice, it also ordered that "no town act passe, but in some publicke towne Meeting orderly called, and only by such as are by lawe enabled so to doe."

Obadiah, who seems to have been the lawyer of the family, brought a "test case" against Thomas Rice on behalf of the town. In court at Cambridge (April 6, 1664) the case was settled by the town withdrawing its claim for repossession and paying its own expenses, but the defendant paying all arrears in rates and engaging "for the future to yeeld ye Assistance of his person & Estate for ye carrying an end of the affaires of the place both Civill & Ecclesiasticall as Religion & duty binds."

The case was of absorbing interest to the community, and the men of Marlborough had flocked to Cambridge to hear it argued. "The Inhabitants of the sd place being generally present," the court took advantage of their presence to advise them all to pay their arrears; that so doing and giving their "Assistance for the future" they "may continue in theire possessions & Allotments . . . non-observance of any Towne Orders or Agreements notwithstanding."

"Also ye Court solemnely advised them, That they all Joyntly concurre in such waies as might lead to the furtherance of peace among themselves, freely forgiveing one anothr all matters & occasions of former grievances & forbearing to make any repetition thereof, to the upbraiding of any or interrupting of theire future peace that so the God of peace may bee theire portion & his blessing upon the sd place, them, & theires in all wherein they stand in need of his favourable presence to bee with them."

But by this time other controversies had developed involving titles and divisions.

The Wards and their friends constituted the party in power, but the opposing clique were numerous and bitterly dissatisfied, declaring themselves a majority both of residents and of proprietors, and in "gravity" able to "ballance or overballance" their opponents. Some of them, believing in "direct action," seized the Town Book—not, as they afterwards explained, to destroy it, but only "to rectify what was amise" in it. They were also charged with but denied any intention or desire to "root out" pastor Brimsmead.

The Ward party appealed to the General Court, requesting it to appoint another committee with power to weigh and adjust the community's troubles—which, they said, had come "partly through our owne corruptions and by ye temptations of Sathan hindering our succeeding in matters both civill and ecclesiasticall, which have been and ise very uncomfortable to us and our friends."

The fifteen signatories included Ward, his sons Obadiah and Samuel, and his sons-in-law Abraham Williams, John Johnson, and Abraham How.

The opposing party remonstrated against the appointment of a committee and the implied interference of the legislature in the town's management of its affairs.

The General Court appointed a committee, nevertheless. But no peace resulted. Mutual complaints and recriminations filled year after year until a temporary suspension was enforced by the breaking out of the Indian War known as "King Philip's."

CHAPTER IX

King Philip's War

The mutual disposition of Indians and colonists varied with local circumstances.

In martial prowess, the red men shrank in the eyes of the whites as the latter grew in numbers and strength, and around Boston the Indians early realized their impotence and accepted a dependent position. In numerous other parts of Massachusetts, where the apparent strength was more nearly equal, or favored the savages, the feeling was very bitter. The whites coveted the lands claimed by the Indians, and too frequently held their traditionary rights, and their persons, in scant respect.

After the Pequot war (1637) and until the death of Massasoit in 1661, a showing of neutrality was generally maintained. The Indians with their women and children were frequent visitors to the settlements with furs, venison, mats, etc., to sell, or passing along the trails to fish and hunt. But the border towns, as Marlborough, were never entirely free from danger, and shortly after Massasoit died—and, first, Alexander ("Wamsutta") and then Philip ("Metacomet") became chief of the Wampanoags—many Indians began to chafe anew at the civilization that had spread so far over their former hunting-grounds.

In Marlborough, jealousy of the Indian ownership of the Indian Plantation lent special rancor to the general prejudice against the natives.

Superstition helped to increase the mutual distrust. From merely "poor heathen" who had never heard of Christianity, the Indians had come to be regarded as literal agents of the devil.

The mutterings of the coming conflict were heard on all sides. Men's minds were taut and read their fears in every brewing of the elements. Horses were heard "galloping in the air" and told of as a token of war. An Indian bow was seen in the sunset.

The storm broke in 1675, and for fourteen months death and destruction ravaged the colony.

The Indian horror as it appeared to those early colonists was not in the conflict of battle. During King Philip's war there was only one battle worthy of the title, and that quickly terminated in a frightful holocaust of Indians of all ages and both sexes. The horror was the wraith of bloody tragedy raised by small parties of the red men stealthily traveling from point to point, burning outlying houses and killing at every opportunity; and by larger bands descending upon isolated settlements, in some cases destroying them entirely, slaying many of their inhabitants and carrying others into captivity. There were no non-combatants. Men, women, and children alike paid tribute with their lives.

At the rumor of the red men's approach, the inhabitants of outlying houses abandoned everything—their cattle, their barns, all the possessions which had cost them years of infinite labor—glad to be able to save even their lives by flight to stronger towns.

But often there was no opportunity for either flight or defense. Death fell as from the sky and with less warning than the thunderbolt.

A family sets out for the meeting-house. The bushes belch smoke—and that family is no more.

At dawn the father opens the cabin door—to meet the bullet of the red man who had crouched outside, awaiting him.

The mother prepares the noonday meal, unconscious of the approach of Death. She comes to the door at his summons—and the swift stroke of the tomahawk is his fatal message.

The father and sons working in the fields do not return as the evening descends—for on the boughs of a tree hang their corpses, mocking the glow of the sunset with their bloody mutilations.

Such tragedies marked every hour when the races were in open conflict, and even in periods of general peace they were many times the portions of those whose vigilance had been relaxed.

True indeed that it was only the people of the frontier townships who were thus imperilled, but it was those people who stretched the bounds of civilization and rendered possible the great republic in which we live today.

Marlborough, being a frontier post upon the road to Connecticut, quickly engaged the attention of the General Court, and a colony fort, or "blockhouse," was built there. The settlement was from time to time the scene of much activity as it developed into a rendezvous for troops going to and from other parts of the colony—we read of a new army of 600 men parading in front of Ward's home—but the resident

Marlborough's Preparations during King Philip's War

The designation of "garrison-houses" and of townsmen and soldiers to defend them. See pages 51 and 52 garrison was only a handful of men, thirty or thereabouts, living in the blockhouse and billeted among the inhabitants.

From the original (7½ x 12 inches) in the Massachusetts Archives.

A blockhouse in those days was ordinarily a square windowless log structure of two rooms, one above the other, the walls solid except for musket-loopholes, and impervious to musket-balls. The upper room (reached by a ladder and a trapdoor) projected two or three feet all around, the floor of the projection having slits through which the musketmen could command the sides of the building.

A number of the inhabitants of Marlborough moved to older and more populous towns when hostilities commenced. The Wards were among those who held their ground.

Those remaining were not, however, satisfied with the plans of Lieutenant Ruddocke, who had been given the command. There were many disputes over the housing and feeding of the garrison, and concerning the dwellings to be fortified. As a result the community on October 1 held a general "council of war."

It was decided to maintain seven (or eight) "garrison-houses"—dwellings selected for their central or more easily defensible positions—as shelters in case of an attack. These were equipped with arms and ammunition and surrounded with "stockades"—solid wooden walls, eight feet high or thereabouts, of split logs driven deep into the ground.

Many other preparations were hastily made. Barrels were filled with water to supplement the food supply found in every pioneer home, and boxes of sand were got ready to cope with conflagrations. The protection of each garrison-house in case of assault was assigned to designated residents, reënforced by a few of the colony soldiers.

William Ward's, Abraham Williams's (Joanna's), and John Johnson's (Deborah's), were chosen as three of the garrison-houses.

Inserted between this and the preceding page is the report of the "council of war." Some changes were made later but they were not of sufficient importance to justify detailed consideration here.

It will be noted that Samuel Ward and Abraham How (Hannah's husband) were assigned to Deacon Ward's, and Increase Ward to Thomas Rice's. William Ward Junior lived with his parents and therefore was another of the defenders in Deacon Ward's—he was now the only unmarried son and shared with his father in the development of the latter's property instead of taking up land on his own account. John Howe, Jr. (Elizabeth's husband) was probably one of the nine townsmen assigned to the home of John Johnson. Obadiah Ward may have been also of the nine, or he may have been with Deacon Ward.

Eleazer Ward was probably in Sudbury—he had during the previous spring married Hannah Rice of that township and had taken up his residence there. He may, however, have been with Deacon Ward, just as local tradition has it.

Of the women of the family: Joanna and Deborah were in their own fortified homes; Hannah was, in time of alarm, with her husband in Deacon Ward's—as were also Sarah (Samuel's wife) and the two unmarried girls, Hopestill and Bethiah; Elizabeth and Mary (Obadiah's wife) were either in John Johnson's or Deacon Ward's; and Record (Increase's wife) was with him in Thomas Rice's. (Samuel and Obadiah had both married in 1667, and Increase in 1672.)

Some day perhaps the story of "King Philip's War" will be adequately told. It has never yet been. The narrative would be too long to give it here.

Settlement after settlement was attacked and a number were burned to the ground.

So long as the people of Marlborough stayed close by their garrison-houses, they felt fairly secure, but outside the stockades death was everywhere. No man dared work alone in the fields that fall or winter or in the following spring, nor was there safety anywhere except in numbers.

In the fields or in their homes, waking or sleeping, men had their weapons always at hand. The Sabbath congregation was a gathering of armed men.

The Indians passed through the township towards the end of February (1676) on their way to their attempted and partially successful destruction of Medfield.

Weeks of suspense followed, the inhabitants continually alarmed by reports of the savages in large numbers to the west. Then on Sunday, March 26, while they were assembled in the meeting-house, came the alarm, "the Indians are upon us." Picture the excited fright of the children, the stumbling haste of the old and feeble. Heartening them, and hastening them to safety in the nearest garrison-houses, are the men and the more confident of the women—the men gripping their muskets, ready for any emergency, and shouting orders and adjurations.

All gained shelter, many in Deacon Ward's close by, but not a minute too soon. One man was crippled for life from a bullet that entered his elbow before he could reach the stockade.

The Indians did not attack the garrison-houses, but they burnt the meeting-house, thirteen dwellings, and eleven barns, killed and mutilated many cattle, destroyed fences and orchards, and then retired to their camp in the neighboring woods. Ward was one of the heaviest losers.

Marlborough did not take its losses "lying down." The following night Lieutenant Jacobs, with some of his soldiers and a party of citizens, surprised the Indian camp and killed and wounded a number of the savages.

This reprisal frightened the enemy off for a time, and the interval was seized by yet more families to flee the township, utilizing the last available carts and teams for the removal of their effects. But not so Deacon Ward despite his seventy-three years! He and a few others stayed on. The number of garrison-houses was reduced to five, and then (by accidental fire) to four.

On April 18 the Indians suddenly returned, destroyed every remaining unfortified dwelling or other structure, and hovered about the township for two days, hoping to surprise some of its defenders outside their garrison-houses, and tempting them to a sally which might be diverted into an ambush—their favorite and often murderously effective trick of war. But both settlers and soldiers were too wary to be drawn out, so the red men abandoned their designs against Marlborough and went on to Sudbury.

The next day (April 21) saw the Indian attack on Sudbury, with slight mortality but great destruction of property, immediately followed by the ambushing and practical annihilation of Captain Wadsworth's relief party.

Two of the Ward family lost their lives during those forty-eight hours. John Howe, husband of Elizabeth, was killed in the Sudbury fighting, and Eleazer (Deacon Ward's youngest son) was shot down as he rode over a hill between Marlborough and Sudbury that has ever since been known as "Mount Ward."

The Indians did not return to Marlborough. There was indeed little to return for. Save the four garrison-houses, they had left nothing but heaps of ashes and charred logs, and abandoned fields stripped clear of cattle.

Four months later, the death of Philip, following the dispersal, killing, or surrender of his followers, marked the end of the war within the present bounds of Massachusetts.

CHAPTER X

After King Philip's War to the Death of William Ward

While New England was fighting the Indians, her political life was undergoing a renewed and intensified consideration by the English Privy Council. Massachusetts was again the subject of the most searching scrutiny, for she had gone much further on her bold way to independence than had the other colonies.

No drastic action followed, but Massachusetts was warned to stay within her own boundaries; to see that all military commissions and judicial proceedings be in the name of the king, and that every official take the oath of allegiance; and that she must obey the Navigation Acts and repeal any colony laws that ran counter to them.

Back of these warnings were plans to forfeit the colony's charter and thus bring her under the direct control of English authority.

The odds were heavily against Massachusetts. England was for the moment at peace with all Europe and had a well-equipped, experienced navy, and a fair army, both capable of taking the offensive. New England was weakened by the expenses and losses of King Philip's war. But Massachusetts' leaders fenced and parleyed, and the colony continued substantially along her independent course, despite the steady growth of the Moderate Party within her borders. She "spun out the case to the uttermost," and the crisis was delayed yet a few years longer.

In Marlborough, local disputes broke out again when the settlers returned to rebuild their homes, and the controversies were not ended until the report of another General Court committee in the fall of 1679. This found, among other things, that Deacon Edward Rice, the chief of the contestants fighting with Samuel Ward and Abraham How over some land in Assaba meadow, was "justly blameable for his turbulent opposing ye Order made by ye former Committee."

The committee awarded the land between Abraham How, Edward and Samuel Rice, and the minister, but decreed also that "Recompence be made to ye abovesaid Abrahm How, & Samuel Ward to the full value of ye Meadow taken away from them by virtue of this order."

Fifteen months later, in January of 1681, the two warring parties were united by matrimony—Deacon Rice becoming father-in-law to Bethiah Ward by his son Daniel's marriage to her.

The plans for this marriage resulted in a revolutionary change in Ward's home and home life.

Hopestill from the beginning and Bethiah as she became old enough had helped their mother keep house after the family removal to Marlborough. (Elizabeth, the fourth daughter, three years older than Hopestill, had married within the first year in the new township.)

The number grouped around the table had steadily lessened as Richard, Samuel, Obadiah, Increase, and Eleazer had taken wives and set up their own establishments. Of the thirteen children only Hopestill, William, and Bethiah were living on the family homestead when the year 1676 came around. Then, in April 1678 Hopestill married James Woods and set up her own household, and in August of the following year William Junior renounced bachelorhood in order to marry the young widow Eames, leaving Bethiah as the only unmarried child.

William had brought his bride to Deacon Ward's house, but the arrival of their first-born, William of the third generation, had stimulated a desire for a separate home. So, with Bethiah the last unmarried child about to wed, Deacon Ward and his wife, respectively seventy-eight and sixty-eight years of age, decided that they also would try housekeeping by themselves. An entirely new experience it was to be, for when Elizabeth became a bride her husband had been a widower with several children.

Thus plans had gone ahead simultaneously for Bethiah's marriage and for setting up William Junior in his own home.

First, in recognition of the latter's many years of virtual partnership, Deacon Ward bestowed "an estate of lands and housing" upon him. The estate comprised several tracts and the westerly half of the original house-lot together with its proportionate right in all future land divisions.

With the half of the house-lot went the new barn standing on it and the westerly half of the Ward house itself, with the right accorded to William Junior to sever it from the easterly half and move it onto his own property. This was done, and William Junior and his wife and baby thenceforth conducted a separate establishment.

And for the next four or five years Deacon Ward and his wife lived by themselves, in the house thus forcibly reduced in size, the quiet restful life of an elderly couple of comfortable means whose children are all married and well provided for.

These years furnished also an excellent example of the manner in which the early stiff-necked, controversial settlers weighed events in their own balances and acted upon their own decisions. They would not let even the opposition of the General Court stand in the way of their thirst for more land.

In May of 1684 thirty-five Marlborough proprietors petitioned the General Court for authority to purchase the Indian Plantation. Among them were William Junior, Samuel, Henry Kerley (Elizabeth's second husband), Abraham Williams, and Abraham How. Some Indians joined the request, but others of the natives opposed and the legislature refused permission. The Deputies were in favor, but the Assistants saw "no cause" to grant the petition.

The Marlborough men disregarded the refusal and completed the purchase.

The General Court declared the deed illegal, but Marlborough took possession and laid out lands. And those who received them held on most pertinaciously—finally, after thirty-three years of uncertainty, persuading the legislature to confirm their titles.

The dispute with England had dragged, but this time did not die. In the same year that Marlborough acquired the Indian lands came the news that Massachusetts' charter had been revoked.

There were no plans for resistance as there had been half a century earlier. The Moderate party had gained ascendency among the Assistants and increased its following among the Deputies.

The people were divided in sentiment, and many had lost heart in the long struggle to keep English authority from actual contact with their institutions. They felt no inspiration to accept the gage of battle in defense of a theory of independence. The prosperous and more or less citified residents of the coast towns particularly did not welcome the thought of jeopardizing the accumulations of half a century—even if they were, which many were not, of separatist instinct. And the religious zeal, the uncompromising zealotry of the first generation, had grown mild both from overuse and from time's ravages among its exponents.

Nor in England were there any to aid. Charles II had become absolute there.

Percy Kirke was slated to take charge of New England. His record in putting down the Monmouth rebellion indicates the measures he would have used to crush any opposition in Massachusetts.

The colony was spared that infliction by the King's sudden death.

There followed another breathing spell, affairs going on in the colony as before the revocation of the charter.

Meantime, in Marlborough, William Ward began to feel the weight of his years, and he entered into a contract with his son Samuel to assume the management of his herd and his lands and to furnish him and his wife with all the household supplies and fuel that they should need for the remainder of their lives, taking his reward in the succession to the William Ward home and the land it stood on, the remaining half of the original house-lot, and various other tracts.

Next, in colony affairs, came an interim administration of English selection, and then in December 1686 arrived Andros, governor of all New England, the first royal governor that Massachusetts had ever known.

There were many who found him bitter to the palate. The Moderates and their friends basked in the sunshine, but the popular party discovered ample vindication for their fears of what would happen under the direct rule of an English appointee.

Andros knew only the rights vested in the King. Representative government came to an end. The House of Deputies was abolished and a council removable by the governor took the place of the Assistants. Taxes were arbitrarily levied, with heavy fines for resistance

Well might people feel that their hard-developed, hard-earned country had been turned upside down. All the joys of self-government wrested from them—a grievance for every man in the colony, former voter or not—for in the latter case was always the underlying consciousness that he could have been a voter if he and his fellows had wished it very earnestly.

Deeper still the knife went, for King's patents were required for all land that rested on town grants—and that meant practically all the occupied land in the colony. The farms and homes that they and their fathers had hewn out of the wilderness, were suddenly declared not theirs unless they paid fees and obtained fresh titles from the new government. And the fees and expenses became increasingly greater as the conditions disclosed their full possibilities to the grafting office-holders of those days.

Massachusetts submitted to all these indignities. She was angry but inert. Consolation can be found in the knowledge that England herself lay prone at the feet of the same despotism. London and other lesser cities had similarly been stripped of their charters by procedures directed by the notorious Judge Jeffreys, who "made all the charters like the walls of Jericho, fall down before him, and returned laden with surrenders, the spoils of towns."

In the full heat of that turbulent and excited summer, the sturdy old Englishman, "William Ward of Sudbury," passed away and was laid to rest in Spring Hill Cemetery, to be loved and reverenced by succeeding generations as the patriarch of the family.

For nearly half a century he had lived and labored in the New World of his adoption, playing an important rôle in the founding of two successful townships, seeing thirteen children develop to ripe manhood and womanhood; and for himself achieving the age of eighty-four years.

He had made his last will a few months earlier "enjoying the entireness of my understanding, but by reason of my great age, and the infirmities thereof being sensible of my approaching death."

He appointed his wife Elizabeth his executrix, and made her heir for life to all his cattle and other "moveable goods of every sort, both within doors and without." Whatever she did not use during her lifetime was to go in equal shares "unto all my children, viz., those which I have by her, and those which I have by my former wife."

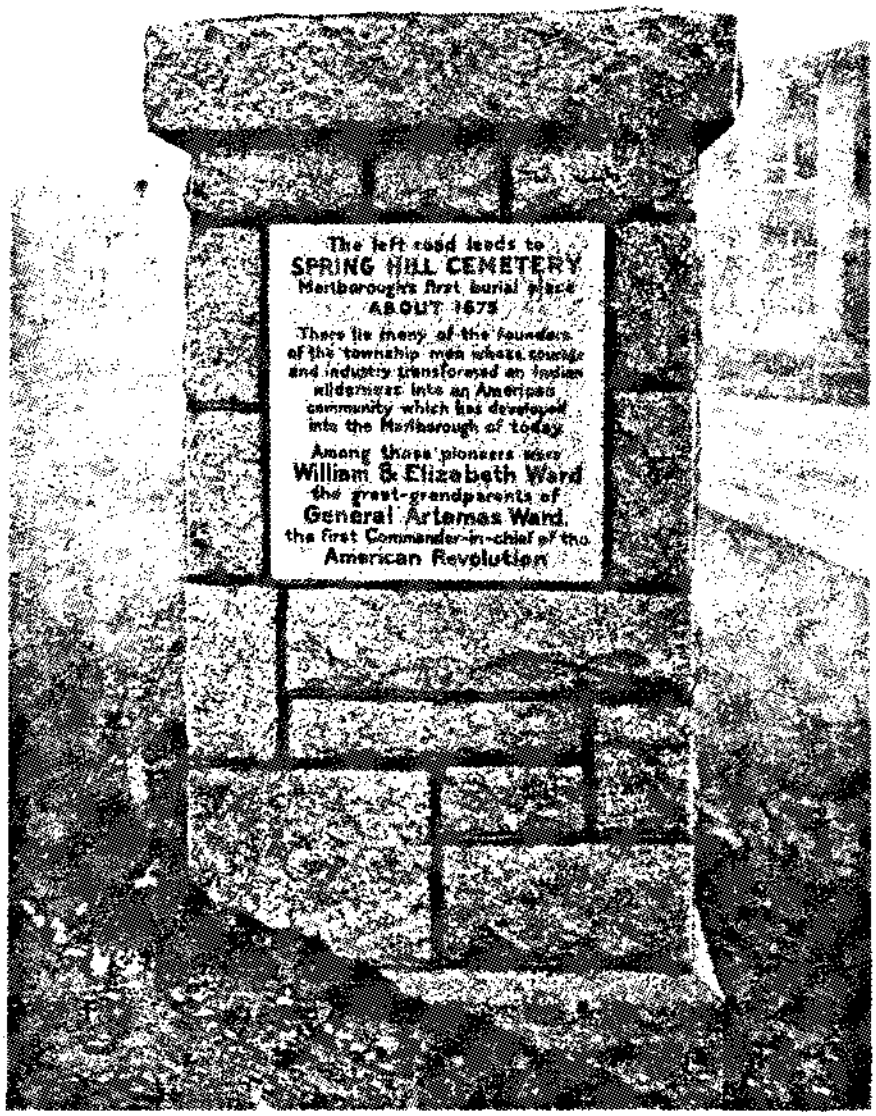

He divided his real estate among his sons Samuel, John, and Increase, and his grandson William (son of Obadiah). Samuel was, conditionally, the chief beneficiary, in virtue of the agreement to care for Elizabeth Ward for the remainder of her life. William Junior received no land, his share having been already deeded to him, as noted on an earlier page.

He gave small money bequests to all his children and to the widows and children of his two deceased sons Richard and Eleazer.

His sons John and Increase and his son-in-law Abraham Williams were named "overseers" of the will, "to be helpfull unto my wife as occasion shall serve."

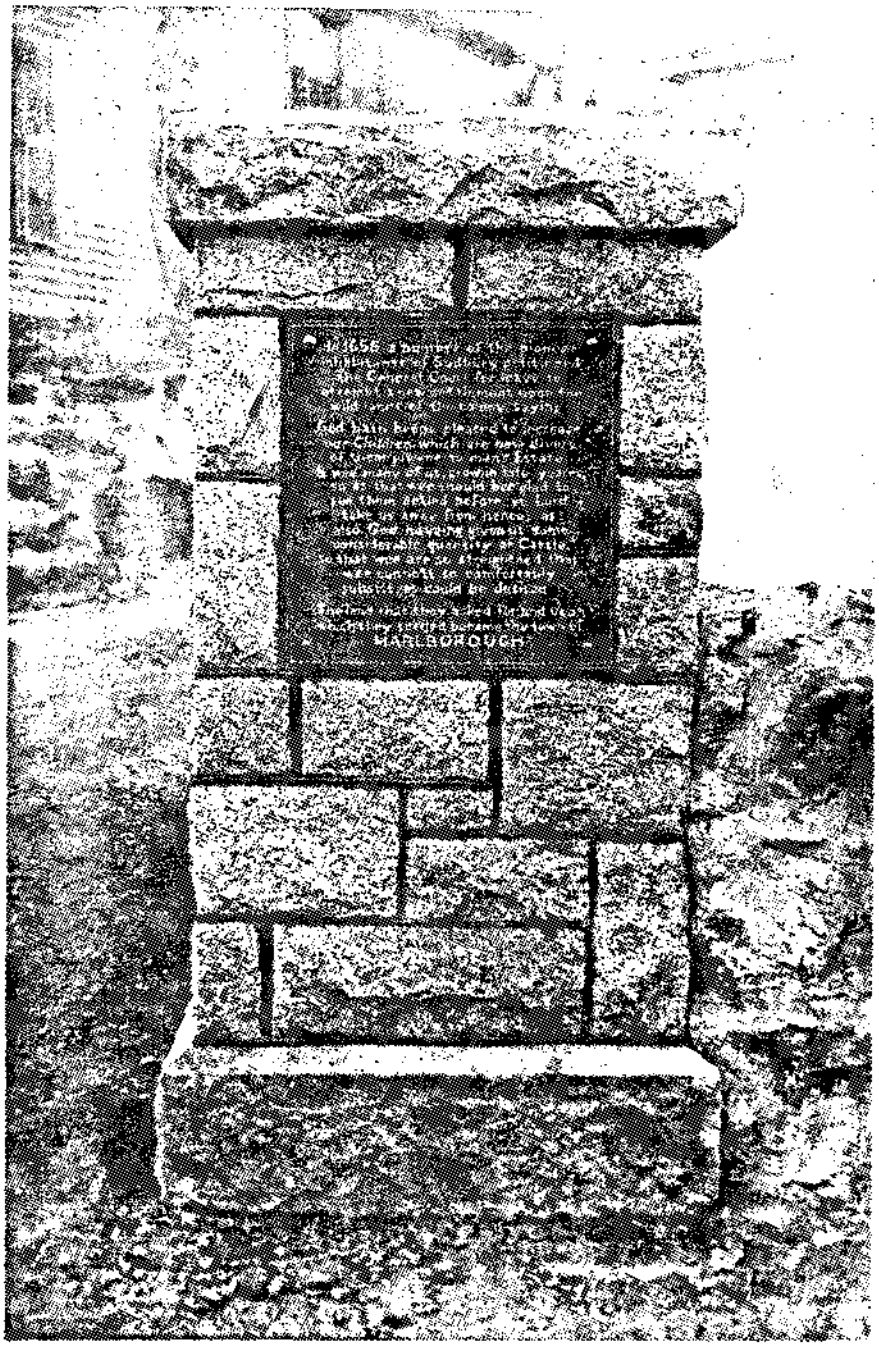

His worthy helpmate—who had in her wifely, motherly sphere participated to the full in his struggles and successes—survived him by thirteen years and then joined him on Spring Hill: "Here lyes the body of Elizabeth Ward, the servant of the Lord, deceased in the 87th year of her age, December the 9th, in the year of our Lord, 1700."

From the death of William Ward, the story of his descendants must be sought in the following pages under their own separate names. From Marlborough they spread to other parts of the colony, sharing in the founding of other new townships, and then yet further in course of time throughout the entire continent—and beyond its limits—to carve out their destinies in a multiplicity of ways.

PART TWO

WILLIAM WARD'S DESCENDANTS

THE PLAN AND USES OF THE GENEALOGY

In the following pages the record of every Ward parent is printed in 10-point type, the same type as on this page.

The succeeding information concerning his or her children is given in 8-point type, as below:

574. ITHAMAR,[6] born April 24, 1752.
575. NAHUM, born August 11, 1754.

When the number opposite a child's name is given in bold-face figures (as 574 above) instead of light-face figures (as 575 above), it signifies that a further record of that child has been carried forward separately and printed in the same large 10-point type as the story of its parents.

THE ARRANGEMENT OF THE RECORDS

Three main rules have been employed in the arrangement of the thousands of records:

First. The complete stories of the children of a female Ward are given immediately following her own name and story. All her children are numbered in light-face figures. Her grandchildren also are recorded (in small, 6-point type) but they are not numbered, and (as noted in the Introduction) only their names are given. Exceptions are children or grandchildren married to other descendants. They are treated according to their circumstances.

Second. The stories of the children of a male Ward are also given immediately following his name and story, and also numbered with light-face figures, if they are not married; or if, being married, they have no children.

Third. The story of a child of a male Ward who has married and had children is carried forward, further along in the book, as a separate biography in the large 10-point type, its initial 8-point number being repeated in the large 10-point figures on the extreme left of the page, in its consecutive position among other similar large figures. This applies to both male and female children of a male Ward. The few exceptions are instances in which the information is so extremely scant that separate stories were not warranted. The fact of thus carrying forward is shown, as already stated, by printing the original, or 8-point, number of such a child in bold-face, or heavy, type.

Tracing Back

It is a simple matter to trace your ancestry.

The large 10-point number of your nearest Ward ancestor—your father or mother, if one was of Ward birth; or your grandfather or grandmother, if that be the case—appears also further back in the book among the smaller 8-point numbers under his or her Ward parent (your Ward grandparent or great-grandparent). And his or her Ward parent's 10-point number will be still further back in the book in its position among the smaller 8-point numbers.

In this manner you can carry your ancestry right back to William Ward[1], the founder of the family in America.

The small figures superimposed—on all the names carried forward in the large 10-point type (as, for example, John Ward[2]) and on the first member of each family in the 8-point stories and in the 6-point lists of children—tell the number of the generation in America. William Ward, the founder of the family, is "generation one"; his children are "generation two"; his grandchildren "generation three," etc. A member of the seventh generation is thus a great-great-great-great-grandchild of William Ward.[1]

Finding Other Relatives

Having found the records of your children, and of your parents and grandparents, etc., you can next very easily make a record of your Ward cousins of various degrees—your first cousins, your second cousins, your "first cousins once removed," etc.

Everyone knows that a first cousin (a "full cousin," a "cousin german") is the child of one's uncle or aunt. Other cousin relationships are, however, frequently misunderstood and misapplied.

Your "second cousins" are the children of your parents' "first cousins." Your "third cousins" are the children of your parents' "second cousins."

The term "first cousin, once removed" represents your relationship to your parents' first cousins and to the children of your own first cousins. "Second cousin, once removed" represents your relationship to your parents' second cousins and to the children of your own second cousins.

If you wish to extract a record which will go so far as your second cousins, take a large piece of paper—a sheet of wrapping paper, for example—and rule it, horizontally, with five lines, an inch or so apart.

Then, above the center of the top line place the number of your great-grandparents and immediately below it (on the line) their names.

Next, on the second line, place the numbers and names of your great-grandparents' children, going from left to right, from the oldest to the youngest, the numbers just above the line and the names on the line. Space the names as widely as possible—i.e., if your great-grandparents had only four children, place the oldest to the left-hand side, the youngest to the right-hand side, and the two others between them. This being done, add the names of the wives or husbands of those who married.

Below their names, on the next line, similarly put their children. And again, on the fourth line, the children of those on the third line; and on the fifth line, the children of those on the fourth. Draw connecting lines from parents to children in order to avoid mixing families.

You started the first line with your great-grandparents.

The second line will show your Ward grandparent and his or her brothers and sisters—your great-uncles and great-aunts.

The third line will carry your Ward parent and his or her brothers and sisters—your uncles and aunts; and their first cousins—who are your "first cousins, once removed."

The fourth line will give yourself, and your brothers and sisters, under your parents; and your first cousins under the names of your uncles and aunts. All the others will be your second cousins.

The fifth line will give you your children, if you have any; your nieces and nephews—the children of your brothers and sisters; your "first cousins, once removed"—the children of your cousins; and your "second cousins, once removed," the children of your second cousins.

The larger the sheet of paper you start with, the more likely you are to obtain a clear and satisfactory chart. The first trial will probably look ragged because of the differences in the size of families, but it should be possible to make an acceptable copy by using a little care in grouping.

Christian, or Given, Names

Various spellings of Christian, or given, names have been accepted in family records, for a name is not necessarily of orthodox formation. Its essential purpose is the identification of an individual, and that is equally well accomplished whether Jeannette is spelled "Jeannette" or "Jeanette" or "Jennett" or with other modifications. Some names are consistently spelled at variance with the customary style. The family, for example, has always spelled "Mehetabel" with an "i" instead of the biblical "e" as the fourth letter and has never used the old form of "Mehetabeel."

THE SECOND GENERATION

Below are the members of the Second Generation, the children of "WILLIAM WARD[1] of Sudbury." All of them married and all had children, so all are continued in the pages following under their own headings.

BORN IN ENGLAND

2. JOHN,[2] born about 1626.
3. JOANNA, born about 1628.
4. OBADIAH, born about 1632.
5. RICHARD, born about 1635.
6. DEBORAH, born about 1637.

BORN IN SUDBURY, MASS.

7. HANNAH, born about 1639 (probably in Sudbury).
8. SAMUEL, born September 24, 1641.
9. ELIZABETH, born April 14, 1643.
10. INCREASE, born January 22, 1645.
11. HOPESTILL, born January 24, 1647.
12. WILLIAM, born February 22, 1649.
13. ELEAZER, born about 1650.
14. BETHIAH, born about 1658.

Three of the five full birth-dates given above differ from those of the published vital records, but they constitute, in my opinion, the correct interpretation of the original records.

All the children born in England were, perhaps, by William Ward's first wife (name unknown). Those born in Sudbury were by his second wife, Elizabeth. Stoney.

He had no daughter named Mary. The Mary given in Andrew H. Ward's "Ward Family," 1851, as the twelfth child and the wife of Daniel Stone, was William Ward's daughter-in-law, the widow of his son Richard.

2. JOHN [WARD,[2] born in England about 1626, died July 8, 1708, in Newton, Mass. He married about 1650 in Newton (at that date a village of the township of Cambridge) HANNAH JACKSON, born in London, England, about 1631, baptized May 1, 1634, died April 24 (or 21, or 27, by other records) 1704, in Newton, daughter of Edward and Frances Jackson.

Upon his marriage he settled in Newton, the home of his wife's parents, building a house in the southeasterly part of the village upon a tract of forty-five acres belonging to his father-in-law and subsequently deeded to him by the latter. He had learned the trade of turner and combined its practise with farming, in time increasing his holdings to several hundred acres. When Newton became a separate township in 1679, he was elected to its first board of selectmen and as its first representative in the General Court, being several times re-elected to both posts. He was also a deacon of its first church.

In 1701 he disposed of his real estate, which lay mostly in one body, by deeds of gift to his sons. The quantity of the land given to each was about one hundred acres.

The house that John Ward built for his bride, was later fortified as a "garrison-house" during times of Indian alarms. It was taken down in 1821, after having sheltered seven generations of Wards.

Children, born in Newton, Mass:

15. HANNAH.[3]
16. JOHN, born January 26, 1653, died June 5, 1654, in Newton, Mass.
17. REBECCA, born June 15, 1655, died August 28, 1735, in Newton, Mass. Unmarried.
18. JOHN, born March 8, 1658.
19. ELIZABETH, born June 18, 1660.
20. DEBORAH, born July 19, 1662.
21. WILLIAM, born November 19, 1664.
22. RICHARD, born November 15, 1666.
23. MERCY, born January 27, 1668, died June 4, 1685, in Newton, Mass.
24. EDWARD, born March 13, 1671.
25. ELEAZER, born February 26, 1672.
26. JONATHAN, born April 22, 1674.
27. JOSEPH, born November 15, 1677.

3. JOANNA WARD,[2] born in England about 1628, died December 8, 1718, in Marlborough, Mass. She married about 1659, ABRAHAM WILLIAMS, born in England in 1628, died December 29, 1712, in Marlborough.

He settled in Watertown, Mass., and was of that place in 1652 when he took the oath of fidelity. In August 1654 he purchased a house and twelve acres from John Callow, reselling it in 1659 (Joanna joining in the deed). Three years later he bought a house and six acres in the section now known as Newton Corners. In the following year he moved again, joining the Ward family in Marlborough, taking up land near the southeasterly end of "Belcher's Pond."

Marlborough proved to his liking, for he permanently settled there, combining farming and tavern-keeping. The site of his dwelling is after 260 years still devoted to a house of public refreshment which perpetuates his name and that of his descendants—the "Williams Tavern." During King Philip's War, and later, his home was a "garrison-house" (see page 51, Chapter X).

He was prominent in the community, serving as representative in the General Court, and as lieutenant of militia.

His will disposed of a considerable amount of property, both personal and real. Among the bequests is a conditional one to William Ripley, an apprentice: "concerning William Ripley, whom we have brought up from a child; his time is not long to stay on strict terms—then nine pounds will be due him—one he hath already had—let his due be paid out of the whole estate—if he will stay with Abraham and John for reasonable wages by the year, three or four years, then I give to him for his own forever, to settle on, twenty acres of land at Rock Patch with the meadow to it, next to my son[-in-law] Beaman's. If he like not that, he shall have twenty acres at the west end of Crane Hill and three acres of meadow at Cedar meadow, above the island next to Barnes; and if not that he must go."

The instrument also directed that for his wife and himself there should be provided "a decent and christian burial, without weeds or flourishes, for our fathers and mothers had none."

Children, born in Marlborough, Mass:

28. ELIZABETH,[3] born in Newton, Mass., married July 26, 1678, THOMAS BEAMAN (BEMOND) of Marlborough, Mass., born 1649, died October 21, 1731, son of Gamaliel and Mary Beaman of Dorchester, Mass.

    CHILDREN: Elizabeth,[4] Daniel, Eleazer (married Hannah Howe, daughter of 56), Sarah, Lydia E., Abraham (married Mary Rice, 208).

29. JOHN, born July 6, 1665, died in infancy.

30. WILLIAM, died August 30, 1702. He married before 1692 ELIZABETH ———.

    CHILDREN: Thomas,[4] Abraham.

31. LYDIA, born July 9, 1669.

32. JOHN, born August 1675, died January 3, 1718, in Marlborough.

4. OBADIAH WARD,[2] born in England about 1632, died January 5, 1718, in Marlborough, Mass. He married November 28, 1667, in Marlborough, MARY ———. She died August 22, 1706, in Marlborough.

He had land assigned him in Sudbury, Mass., on his coming of age in 1653. His removal to Marlborough is told in Chapter VIII. See especially the reference to him on page 47. He was one of the three contractors for the erection in 1661 of the frame of the minister's house. He was a delegate to the Council for Safety of the People and Conservation of the Peace, May 9 and 22, and June 5, 1689, and also a representative at the General Court 1690–1691 during the critical period intervening between the forcible deposition of Governor Andros and the convening of the General Court under the new charter.

Children, born in Marlborough, Mass:

33. ALICE,[3] born November 14, 1668.

34. WILLIAM, born January 7, 1670.

35. OBADIAH, born September 18, 1672.

36. BETHIAH, born January (or June) 1674, died June 7 following.

37. MARY, born May (or March) 4, 1676, died the same day.

38. JANE, born March 3, 1677.

39. EDMUND, born January 21, 1679.

40. SARAH, born January 29, 1681, married April 9, 1706, SAMUEL BARTLETT of Marlborough, Mass.

41. RICHARD, born April 26, 1683.
42. ELIZABETH, born December 4, 1685, died January 21, 1730, in Marlborough, Mass. Unmarried.
43. HANNAH, born January 3, 1688, died February 23, 1740, in Marlborough, Mass. Unmarried.
44. ELEAZER, born November 2, 1689.
45. PRUDENCE, born 1691.

5. RICHARD WARD,[2] born in England about 1635, died March 31, 1666, by drowning in the Sudbury River. He married September 8, 1661, in Sudbury, Mass., MARY MOORES, daughter of John and Elizabeth Moores. She died June 10, 1703,

His widow and William Ward were appointed guardians of the children during their minority. She married (2) Deacon Daniel Stone of Sudbury and bore him eight children.

Children, born in Sudbury:

46. OBADIAH,[3] born April 19, 1663.
47. LYDIA, born March 16, 1665.

6. DEBORAH WARD,[2] born in England about 1637, died August 9, 1697, in Marlborough, Mass. She married November 19, 1657, in Sudbury, Mass., JOHN JOHNSON, born about 1629, died May 4, 1713, in Marlborough, son of Solomon and Elinor Johnson.

He was a Marlborough pioneer. See references to him in Chapters VIII and IX.

Children, born in Marlborough:

48. JOHN,[3] born January 21, 1672, scalded to death November 23, 1676.
49. DANIEL, born April 5, 1675, died early in 1722. He married December 23, 1697, in Marlborough, Mass., DOROTHY LAMB of Framingham, Mass. She died January 7, 1760.

CHILDREN: Solomon,[4] Deborah, Martha, Zebediah, Daniel.

50. ELIZABETH, born July 20, 1677, died September 22, 1726, in Marlborough, Mass. She married February 9, 1699, in Marlborough, JOSEPH WITHERBEE. He was constable at Framingham, Mass., in 1712.

CHILDREN: Caleb,[4] Thankful, Joseph, Hepzibah, Deborah, Elizabeth.

51. DEBORAH, born August 22, 1678.
52. JOHN, born (probably) February 16, 1680, married MARY ———.

7. HANNAH WARD,[2] born about 1639, probably in Sudbury, Mass., died November 3, 1717, in Marlborough, Mass. She married March 26, 1657, in Watertown, Mass., ABRAHAM HOW,[3] probably from Roxbury, Mass. He died January 30, 1695, in Marlborough.

He was one of the early Marlborough settlers. See references to him in Chapter VIII, IX, and X.

Children:

53. DANIEL,[3] born about 1658, probably in Watertown, Mass., died April 23, 1718, in Marlborough, Mass. He married October 12, 1686, in Marlborough, ELIZABETH KERLEY, born about 1660, died 1735.

He was a captain of militia and owned a considerable acreage in Marlborough Westborough, and Lancaster.

CHILDREN: Martha[4] (married Nahum Ward, 90), Hezekiah, Daniel, Jonathan, Elisabeth, David, Zerviah (married her cousin Joseph How, son of 55).

54. MARY, born June 30, 1659, in Watertown, Mass., died September 29, 1723, in Marlborough, Mass. She married January 8, 1678, in Sudbury, Mass., JOHN BOWKER, born 1651, died August 27, 1721, in Marlborough, probably son of Edward Bowker of Dorchester, Mass.

CHILDREN: John,[4] Martha and Mary (twins), Asa, Ezekiel, Hannah (married her cousin Gershom Howe, son of 56), Rachel.

55. JOSEPH, born April 9, 1661, in Watertown, Mass., died September 4, 1701, in Marlborough, Mass. He married December 29, 1687, in Charlestown, Mass., DOROTHY MARTIN.

He was a large landholder in Marlborough, Lancaster, and Watertown, and owned the first mills in Feltonville, Mass., erected there before 1700.

CHILDREN: Sarah,[4] Eunice, Bethiah, Joseph (married his cousin Zerviah How, daughter of 53), Abraham, Jedediah.

56. HANNAH, born November 9, 1663, in Marlborough, Mass., died June 24, 1735, in Marlborough. She married November 1684 in Marlborough, ELEAZER HOWE, born January 18, 1662, died March 17, 1737, son of John and Mary Howe. He was a captain of militia and a man of property.

CHILDREN: Martha,[4] Deborah, Eleazer and Hannah (twins), Gershom (married his cousin Hannah Bowker, daughter of 54), Ephraim, Eleazer, Hannah (married Eleazer Beaman, son of 28).

57. ELIZABETH, born April 5, 1665, in Marlborough, Mass., died July 26, 1739, in Marlborough. She married SAMUEL BRIGHAM, born January 12, 1652, in Cambridge, Mass., died July 24, 1713, in Marlborough, son of Thomas and Mercy (Hurd) Brigham.

He resided about a mile and a quarter east of the old Meeting-house Common, Marlborough. He owned a good deal of land, and erected and operated a tannery. He served as a lieutenant during "Queen Anne's War" and his dwelling was fortified as a garrison-house.

CHILDREN: Elisabeth,[4] Hepzibah (married John Maynard, 185), Samuel, Lydia, Jedediah, Jotham, Timothy, Charles, Persis, Antipas.

58. DEBORAH, born March 1 (or 15), 1667, in Marlborough, Mass., died November 4, 1743, in Marlborough. She married 1688 Ensign JOHN BARRETT, born 1663, died October 5, 1715, in Marlborough, son of John and Mary (Pond) Barrett.

CHILDREN: Hannah,[4] Sarah, Lydia, Thankful, Benoni.

59. REBECCA, born February 4, 1668, in Marlborough, Mass., died May 10, 1749, in Marlborough. She married PETER RICE, born October 24, 1658, in Sudbury, Mass., died November 28, 1753, in Marlborough, son of Thomas and Mary Rice.

He served as a militia captain and was one of the committee which in 1711 designated the garrison-houses to which the inhabitants were to resort in time of danger.

CHILDREN: Elisha,[4] Zipporah and Zephaniah (twins), Cyprian, Pelatiah, Elnathan, Peter, Abigail, Deborah, Rebecca (married Uriah Eager, son of 74), Abraham.

60. ABRAHAM, born October 8, 1670, in Marlborough, Mass., married November 9, 1695, in Marlborough, MARY HOWE.

He was a member of the company of Marlborough men which went to the relief of Lancaster when it was attacked by Indians on July 30–31, 1704, and lost his life in the fight on the latter date.

CHILD: Abigail.[4]

61. SARAH, born December 20, 1672, in Marlborough, Mass., died October 1, 1746, in Marlborough. She married November 14, 1695, in Marlborough, JOSEPH

STRATTON, born January 13, 1667, in Watertown, Mass., died September 18, 1732, in Marlborough, son of John and Elizabeth (Traine) Stratton.

CHILDREN: Joseph,[4] Sarah, Elizabeth, Jonathan.

62. ABIGAIL, born March 4, 1675, died April 17, 1697, in Marlborough, Mass. Unmarried.

8. SAMUEL WARD,[2] born September 24, 1641, in Sudbury, Mass., died November 15, 1729, in Marlborough, Mass. He married (1) June 6, 1667, in Marlborough, SARAH HOWE, sister-in-law of his sister Elizabeth (9), born September 25, 1644, in Sudbury, died August 11, 1707, in Marlborough.

He married (2) May 25, 1710, ELIZABETH BEERS, daughter of Captain Richard and Elizabeth Beers of Watertown, Mass. She survived him.

Samuel's house-lot (by reversion from his brother Richard—see page 44 of Chapter VIII) was west of the Indian line, and probably near the old John Gleason place. His contract with his parents and his standing under the will of his father are told on pages 57 and 58 of Chapter X.

Under him, succeeding his father, the original "William Ward" house (i.e., the remaining structure on the original site) was frequently the place of the midweek church meetings and also the recognized abode of visiting and temporary ministers. During the intermittent French and Indian wars from 1689 to 1713, it was a garrison-house as during King Philip's War.

In his will dated May 22, 1727, Samuel Ward says he is "well stricken in years and crazy in body, but of perfect mind, and memory." His will was contested in Probate Court, December 19, 1729, by all his children and heirs (except his son Samuel, the chief beneficiary in virtue of a concurrent agreement to care for him and his wife during their lives) on the ground that he was crazy in mind as well as in body. At length the heirs agreed among themselves touching his will, and desired the judge to approve it.

Children, first marriage, born in Marlborough:

63. SARAH,[3] born April 23, 1668, died unmarried.

64. JOSEPH, born 1670.

65. ELIZABETH, born March 21, 1672.

66. MARY, born 1676.

67. SAMUEL, born March 18, 1678.

68. BETHIAH, born May 25, 1681, died 1757 in Marlborough, Mass., unmarried. She was a lace-maker.

69. DANIEL, born 1687, died April 13, 1760, in Marlborough, Mass.

9. ELIZABETH WARD,[2] born April 14, 1643, in Sudbury, Mass., died April 26, 1710, in Marlborough, Mass. She married (1) January 22, 1662, in Sudbury, JOHN HOWE, born August 24, 1640, in Sudbury, son of John and Mary Howe. He was killed in the Sudbury fighting April 21, 1676, and his "housings destroyed by the Indians."

She married (2) February 18, 1677, in Charlestown, Mass. (as his second wife) Captain HENRY KERLEY, son of William and Ann (King) Kerley of Marlborough, earlier of Lancaster, Mass. Captain Kerley had lost his wife and two or three of his children at the hands of the Indians about fourteen months prior to the killing of Elizabeth's first husband. He died December 18, 1713.

Children, first marriage, born in Marlborough—surname HOWE:

70. SARAH,[3] born before 1670, married about 1685 in Marlborough, Mass., PETER JOSLIN, born December 22, 1665 (or March 6, 1666), son of Nathaniel and Sarah (King) Joslin of Lancaster, Mass.

She and her three youngest children, born during the years 1687 to 1691, were slain by Indians during their raid of July 18, 1692, and her oldest child, PETER,[4] born December 8, 1686, was carried away captive with her sister Elizabeth (73), who was visiting her. Peter was killed shortly after being carried away.

71. JOHN, born September 9, 1671, died May 19, 1754, in Marlborough, Mass. He married (1) REBECCA ———. She died September 22, 1731. He married (2) June 18, 1740, RUTH EAGER, born December 20, 1694, in Marlborough, died October 14, 1781, in Marlborough, daughter of Zachariah and Elizabeth Eager.

CHILDREN: Peter,[4] John, Sarah, Ebenezer, Rebecca, Mary, Hannah, Seth, Elizabeth, Eunice, Dorothy.

72. DAVID, born March 29, 1674, died May 29 following.

73. ELIZABETH, born July 16, 1675, died August 18, 1764. She married January 23, 1699, in Marlborough, Mass., THOMAS KEYES, born February 8, 1674, in Sudbury, Mass. (or in Marlborough ?), died August 25, 1742, in Shrewsbury, Mass., son of Elias and Sarah (Blanford) Keyes of Sudbury, and brother of Major John Keyes (see references under William Ward, 12).

As noted in the story of her sister Sarah (70) she was on July 18, 1692, carried into captivity by Indians. She was held by them until 1696 when she was ransomed and returned to her friends. She was about to be married when captured. Her intended husband, considering her lost to him, resolved never to marry, but upon her return, repented of his vow, and they were united in wedlock. It is said that she never fully recovered from the fright of her capture. The family later moved to Shrewsbury, Mass.

CHILDREN: David,[4] Jonathan, Cyprian, Dinah, Thomas, Henry.

Children, second marriage, born in Marlborough—surname KERLEY:

74. HANNAH, born March 20, 1678, married March 23, 1698, in Marlborough, Mass., ZERUBBABEL EAGER, born 1672, died January 9, 1747, in Marlborough, son of William and Ruth (Hill) Eager.

90. NAHUM, born December 6 (or 18), 1684.

91. ELISHA, born January 12, 1686 (or 1687). He was killed or taken captive by Indians near Worcester, Mass., August 1709, while riding "post" from Marlborough to Hadley. His mother, by her will, dated 1714, gave legacies to her children and provided that "If Elisha shall ever come again" he also should share. He did not return.

92. BATHSHEBA, born May 16, 1689, died October 6, 1693, in Marlborough, Mass.

93. GERSHOM, born January 3, 1693, in Sudbury, Mass., died November 24, 1739, in Marlborough, Mass. He had represented Marlborough at the General Court in the previous year. His house was burned April 1, 1729. He probably resided near the center of the township, as the minister's house caught fire from the cinders of his dwelling. His headstone is one of those preserved in Spring Hill Cemetery, Marlborough. Unmarried.

13. ELEAZER WARD,[2] born about 1650 in Sudbury, Mass., married July 10, 1675, in Marlborough, Mass., HANNAH RICE, daughter of Henry and Elizabeth (Moore) Rice.

He was killed by Indians while riding from Marlborough to Sudbury on April 20 or 21, 1676, during King Philip's War. See also the illustration of "Mount Ward" facing page 52 and the reference on page 53. His widow married Richard Taylor.

Child:

94. HANNAH,[3] born 1676. She was living in April 1686, for William Ward [1] in his will gave a legacy to "Hannah, now wife of Richard Taylor of Sudbury, and also unto Hannah, daughter of the said Hannah by my son Eleazer Ward, deceased."

His career was one of note and diversity. He was a sailor, a Boston merchant, a town founder and real estate operator, a militia officer, a lawyer and judge.

The call of the sea came first, and while still in his twenties he was master of a vessel in the West-Indian service. "A spiritual change came over him and induced him," he said, "to relinquish that mode of life and go into trade in Boston." There we find him admitted by the selectmen as a "new inhabitant," May 6, 1714. Two years later he was again in Marlborough at the time that plans were being perfected for the division of a westward tract of 3200 acres, known as the "Haynes Farm," and he purchased the shares of two of its twenty-three owners. The division of the property was followed by a petition to the General Court for land contiguous to and surrounding both the Haynes and other privately owned tracts for the formation of a new township. This was granted and "Shrewsbury" was established, with forty-four original proprietors—Nahum Ward being one of them.

Ten years later the township was incorporated, and he was elected moderator (or "mayor"), chairman of its first board of selectmen, and assessor. The office of moderator he held for twenty-two years; that of selectman twenty-three years. He was the town's first representative in the General Court and served eight years in the legislature. In addition were two years as town clerk, and four as town treasurer.

In 1731 he was admitted to the bar and became a practising lawyer, being in the same year commissioned as justice of the peace. In 1745 he was appointed judge of the Court of Common Pleas. His military titles show the same advance—from ensign in the town's "foot company" in 1722 to the command of his regiment in or before 1736.

He dealt largely in the town lands, both buying and selling, and had interests also in Sturbridge, Tyringham, and other townships.

About 1725 he moved into the large house he had built on a site nearly opposite that on which he erected the "Artemas Ward House" a few years later, and there he resided until his death. Later it became well known as the Baldwin Tavern. Its site is now part of Dean Park.

The original double headstone of Nahum and Martha Ward is embedded in the east face of the west pier of the General Ward Memorial Entrance to the Shrewsbury Cemetery.

He was a Boston merchant with West-Indian connections. He died in Jamaica, West Indies, after a sickness lasting only a few hours, having barely time to dictate and subscribe his will, drawn up by his attending physician whom he appointed one of his executors. At his burial the flags of the shipping in port were hung at half mast. Less gratifying was the prodigal waste of his estate made to pay for elaborate funeral ceremonies.

His widow with their children soon afterwards moved to Westborough, Mass., and later to Petersham, Mass.

Children:

563. LYDIA,[5] born 1732.

564. LUCRETIA.

271. PERSIS WARD,[4] born April 15, 1718, in Shrewsbury, Mass., died October 1, 1768. She married February 26, 1736, BEZALEEL EAGER, born December 22, 1713, son of Abraham Eager. He was thrown against a stone wall by the horse that he was riding, and instantly killed, October 31, 1787.

They lived in that part of Westborough, Mass., which afterwards became Northborough. He served as town moderator, 1761; representative in the legislature, 1760, 1761; and several terms as selectman.

He was highly esteemed in the township. A contemporary journal commented at length on the loss occasioned by his death.

Children, born in Westborough:

565. FRANCIS,[5] born January 8, 1738, died July 26, 1810, in Northborough, Mass. He married (1) December 1, 1768, SARAH FAIRBANKS of Lancaster, Mass. She died June 27, 1791. He married (2) in 1794 ESTHER MOWER of Worcester, Mass.

CHILDREN: Persis,[6] William, Patty, Eber, John, Sally, Benjamin, Levi.

566. NAHUM, born January 19, 1739. He settled in Vermont, first probably in Newfane.

567. EBER, born November 7, 1742. He settled in Worthington, Mass.

568. PERSIS, born April 9, 1744, died September 17, 1746.

569. PERSIS, born June 29, 1747, married March 18, 1777 (as his second wife) PHINEAS HEYWOOD of Shrewsbury, Mass., born July 29, 1744, son of Phineas and Elizabeth Heywood.

570. WARD, born January 16, 1750, died March 14, 1824, in Newfane, Vt. He married Mrs. ABIGAIL (HOLLAND) PIKE.

He was a soldier of the Revolution and fought in the battles of Bennington and Saratoga. He was also one of the early settlers of Newfane, Vt., and held many public offices there—selectman for seven years and town treasurer for fifteen. He was a farmer, land surveyor, and mathematician, preparing astronomical calculations for two or three almanacs.

CHILDREN: Sally,[6] Persis, Patty, Benjamin, Nahum, Walter Ward, Polly.

571. OLIVER, born February 1, 1753, died September 11, 1756.

572. MARTHA, born September 28, 1756, died the same day.

573. OLIVER, born May 10, 1758, died November 6, 1835. He married SOPHRONIA MARTYN, born about 1767, died April 19, 1849, daughter of Nathan Martyn of Northborough, Mass.

274. ARTEMAS WARD,[4] born November 26, 1727, in Shrewsbury, Mass., died October 28, 1800, in Shrewsbury. He married July 31, 1750, in Groton, Mass., SARAH TROWBRIDGE, born December 3, 1724, in Groton, died December 13, 1788, in Shrewsbury, daughter of the Reverend Caleb and Hannah (Walter) Trowbridge and of direct maternal descent from Increase Mather and John Cotton.

This great-grandson of William Ward of Sudbury became his most famous descendant, taking an active part on the patriot side in the decade preceding the Revolution and serving as the first Commander-in-Chief of the Revolutionary forces. His career is fully told in the companion volume to this work, his biography, "The Life of Artemas Ward."

His birthplace was the house that later achieved local fame as the Baldwin Tavern (see reference under his father, Nahum Ward, 90).

He graduated from Harvard College, B.A., 1748, M.A., 1751, and early became prominent in his community, holding numerous town offices.

In 1757 he was elected for the first of many terms as Shrewsbury's representative in the General Court. The following year he was commissioned as major in William Williams's regiment, raised for the Ticonderoga campaign against the French, winning promotion to lieutenant-colonel, and upon his return being appointed colonel of his militia regiment. In 1762 he was made a judge of the Court of Common Pleas.

During these first years following his marriage he lived in the "Yellow House," or "Old Sumner House," its site a few feet to the south of the present Sumner House. In 1763 he bought the now famous old "Artemas Ward House" from his brother Elisha (275) and made it his home thenceforth.

His activity on the patriot side of the political controversy with England commenced with the Stamp Act agitation and was speedily followed by Governor Bernard's revocation of his commission as colonel—for which Ward returned his "compliments to the Governor," saying that he considered himself "twice honored, but more in being superseded, than in having been commissioned," and that he thanked him for the letter of dismissal . . . "since the motive that dictated it is evidence that I am, what he is not, a friend of my country."

Two years later (1768) he was elected to the Council in a contest with Lieutenant-Governor Hutchinson, but was promptly vetoed by Bernard.

Hutchinson's letter to ex-Governor Pownall, one of several on the subject, describes Ward as "a very sulky fellow, who I thought I could bring over by giving him a commission in the provincial forces after you left the government, but I was mistaken."

Ward was elected again in 1769 and again vetoed. On his third election in 1770 he was accepted. He had been marked for slaughter a third time, but Hutchinson (then acting-governor) decided to accept him for fear that a new refusal would "increase the bad spirit in the House and through the province."

He was prominent in the Worcester County conventions of 1774, which declared that Massachusetts owed no obedience to the English

Parliament, closed the courts, and planned measures in the event of "an invasion, or danger of an invasion" of the county by English troops. He was a delegate to both provincial congresses called to succeed the General Court and was by both named as Second General Officer to command the militia in the event of its being called out by the newly formed Committee of Safety. His old militia regiment meantime reelected him colonel.

With the province aroused to this degree, the first overt act meant civil war. This came with the firing at Lexington and the fight at Concord Bridge.

General Ward was ill in bed when the express rider reached Shrewsbury with news of the clash with the British troops, but the next morning at daybreak he was on his way to join the militiamen who had driven the redcoats back to Boston and encamped around the town.

So developed the most important and most critical period of General Ward's life. As Jedediah Preble, First General Officer, did not act upon his election, Ward assumed the chief command of the forces surrounding Boston, both those of Massachusetts and those that came in from other New England states. With no rank except that accorded by an informal provincial congress, with no authority to enlist men, without adequate supplies, he took the dangerous post of head of an armed rebellion against one of the world's greatest powers.

There was, quite naturally under the circumstances, a good deal of laxity and disorder in the camps, and much restlessness among the men who had left their farms and families at a moment's notice—ready to fight but totally unprepared for a protracted siege; and bedevilled by half-patriots subtly poisoning minds and creating dissensions. The conditions stimulated a flood of criticism. Ward was considered overlenient to offenders, and it was charged that he held the reins too loosely. His peculiarly constituted army nevertheless achieved its purpose—it protected the province from the English troops by keeping them besieged within the town. Other men were urged for the command, but "both friend and enemy among the leaders of Massachusetts realized that to put another in his place might overnight destroy the province."* Ward indeed "filled his most difficult post with so substantial a degree of dexterity that even his most bitter detractor—James Warren of Plymouth—feared the result of making a change and . . . testified 'we dare not supersede him here.'"

Ward was at that time a man of forty-seven years; of medium height; clean shaven, of prominent features; and somewhat corpulent. One may picture him "dressed in the manner of the times—hair in a powdered wig; a long coat with silver buttons; a figured neckcloth surmounting a ruffled shirt; a long waistcoat with big pockets; knee-breeches, and riding-boots. A 'God-fearing' man, strongly believing in and living up to the religion he professed; quiet, thoughtful, and rather over-stern in demeanor; somewhat slow in speech and with a biblical turn to his conversation; inflexible in his ideas, and fully convinced that the Massachusetts Bay Colony was the land most approved by Providence, and that those of Massachusetts were the Chosen People."

The first weeks of the War of the Revolution were punctuated by many alarms, culminating with the third week of June in well authenticated reports that the reenforced English army had determined to raise the siege. To prevent this movement the Committee of Safety made its session of June 15 historic by passing a resolution recommending the Council of War to seize "Bunker's Hill" and suggesting that "some one hill or hills on Dorchester Neck be likewise secured"—those two positions commanding the peninsulas to the north and south of the peninsula of Boston.

All histories prior to "The Life of Artemas Ward" have it "that the result of the action of the council of war on this resolution of the Committee of Safety was Ward's order to fortify Bunker Hill—and the resolution and order have been variously interpreted: as a step of almost blind recklessness, a desperate hazard, occasioned by the urgent necessity to do something to check the British plans to raise the siege; as a move to offset the British intention to take Dorchester Neck; as an act of defiance calculated to bring on a general engagement; as the first step in the contemplated expulsion of the English from Boston.

"But the determination at which the council of war of June 15 actually arrived was of a character much bolder—no less than a sudden tightening of the lines around the British forces by the simultaneous fortification of both Bunker Hill and Dorchester Neck."

The Dorchester Neck project was set aside because General Thomas, in command of the right wing, did not feel that his division was strong enough to defend such a possession, but on the following day Ward issued his orders for the seizure and fortification of Bunker Hill.

Then followed the famous "Battle of Bunker Hill"—the English troops winning the position but at such heavy cost that their generals forthwith renounced all plans for breaking through the American lines.

Thus was the Siege of Boston maintained under Ward until the arrival on July 2 of George Washington of Virginia, elected Commander-in-Chief by the Continental Congress in the well-founded hope of uniting the colonies in a common cause against the English government.

On Washington's assumption of the chief post, Ward accepted the command of the right wing, with headquarters at Roxbury. Eight months later his division carried through his long cherished object—the seizure and fortification of Dorchester Peninsula. This compelled the evacuation of Boston by the British—who never again, except as prisoners of war, set foot within the present boundaries of Massachusetts.

In the following month Washington marched for New York, and Ward took command of the Eastern Department with headquarters in Boston, remaining in that post until March 20, 1777, on the repeated requests of the Continental Congress and Washington, despite serious ill health.

Following his resignation, he was active as a state executive: much of the time as president of the Executive Council; on a secret committee on Tory movements; as president of the Court of Inquiry on the first Rhode Island expedition; as president of the Committee of Investigation of the failure of the Penobscot expedition, etc.

In 1779 he was elected to the Continental Congress for the year 1780 and became a member of the Continental Board of War. He was reelected for 1781 and 1782, but was compelled to decline the third term because of ill health.

His next important service was with Samuel Adams and Nathaniel Gorham on the committee to check the unrest in Hampshire County fomented by Tory agitators.

He was again in the General Court as Speaker of the House during the days of Shays' Rebellion. In his other rôle as a chief justice of the Court of Common Pleas, his determined stand against the insurgents in front of the Worcester courthouse is one of the most dramatic incidents in the history of the county.

He was a representative in the second and third United States Congresses, aligning with the Federalists and supporting many Washington policies despite the fact that he and Washington never liked each other.

"By the summer of 1797 General Ward had begun to feel that his strength was unequal to his judicial duties. On June 12, writing to his daughter Maria and her husband, Dr. Ebenezer Tracy, he says: 'the lawyers in the general court are endeavoring to demolish the Courts of Common Pleas in this Commonwealth & to establish a circuit court in lieu thereof, and it is probable they will effect it. It don't affect me much for I shall soon leave that Court and confine myself at home. I am old & infirm, it is time for me to quit the theatre of action, and while I remain here live a domestic life.'

"He sat in court for the last time during the session of December, 1797, and soon after terminated his long career as a judge."

He spent the remaining two years of his life in quiet retirement.

"His letters show him, in his old age, as in his younger years, full of kindly love for his children and the members of their families—condoling with them in their afflictions, and rejoicing in their happiness, always keeping in the foreground the God he had served so conscientiously all his life, and inculcating the same reliance in, and acceptance of, divine decrees. For himself, he was expecting the end and praying that he might be 'prepared.'"

He died on October 28, 1800. "A long procession of carriages formed his funeral cortège and an impressive address marked the last rites.

"Thus closed the career of Artemas Ward, one of the worthiest of Massachusetts' many noble sons. He had played a prominent part in the generation which founded the great republic of the United States. He had stood in the forefront of revolution when the challenge was thrown down to the might of the British Empire, and had held equally resolute against the wrath of compatriots when it ran counter to the best interests of the state or nation. His had been a character of strength and stability which could be swayed neither by favor nor by fear; and a life of continuous industry from youth to old age. A character and a life well deserving a high place in the annals of Massachusetts."

The most important recent memorials to General Ward are cited in the Introduction to this volume.

The "Artemas Ward House," Shrewsbury, Mass., his home for thirty-seven years, is open to the public every week-day during the summer months. It is a prominent feature of the state road between Boston and Worcester. Its historical associations and its store of early colonial and revolutionary relics attract many visitors — students, historical writers, and others, in addition to members of the family.

His manuscript letters and orders, etc., are widely held. The largest collection is in the Massachusetts Historical Society, Boston, donated by Artemas Ward, 2722, and containing additions from the collections of Catherine Maria (Ward) Barrell, 1340; Roxa Sprague (Dix) Southard, daughter of 2731; Sarah Elizabeth (Dix) Fisher, 2732; Florence Grosvenor Ward, 4403; Josephine Lewis Danforth and Antoinette (Danforth) Smith, 4368 and 4369; and Gertrude Carruth (Washburn) Weeks, daughter of 4348.

Also in the Massachusetts Historical Society are his commission as Massachusetts Commander-in-Chief, presented by Catherine Maria (Ward) Barrell, 1340, and reproduced in "The Life of Artemas Ward"; his Order Book, donated by Rebecca Langdon (Prince) Lamson, 2738; his sword, the gift of Charles (Carlos) Thomas Atherton Ward, 4418; his own copy of the diary he kept during the Ticonderoga Expedition of 1758, donated by Florence Grosvenor Ward, 4403; and some additional letters bound in the Heath, Pickering, and Thomas MSS.

A second important group of manuscripts is in the Massachusetts Archives, Boston.

There are two contemporary portraits of General Ward. The better known, that by Charles Willson Peale, in 1794 or 1795, hangs in Independence Hall, Philadelphia. Copies of it are in the Old and New State Houses, Boston; the Artemas Ward Annex to the Howe Memorial Library, Shrewsbury; the Courthouse, Worcester, Mass.; and the homes of Artemas Ward, 2722, Judge Henry Galbraith Ward, 2723, and Agnes (Ward) White, 4385. Mrs. White's copy is a free rendering by Thomas Sully. The photogravure opposite page 106 is, as noted, from the Independence Hall original.

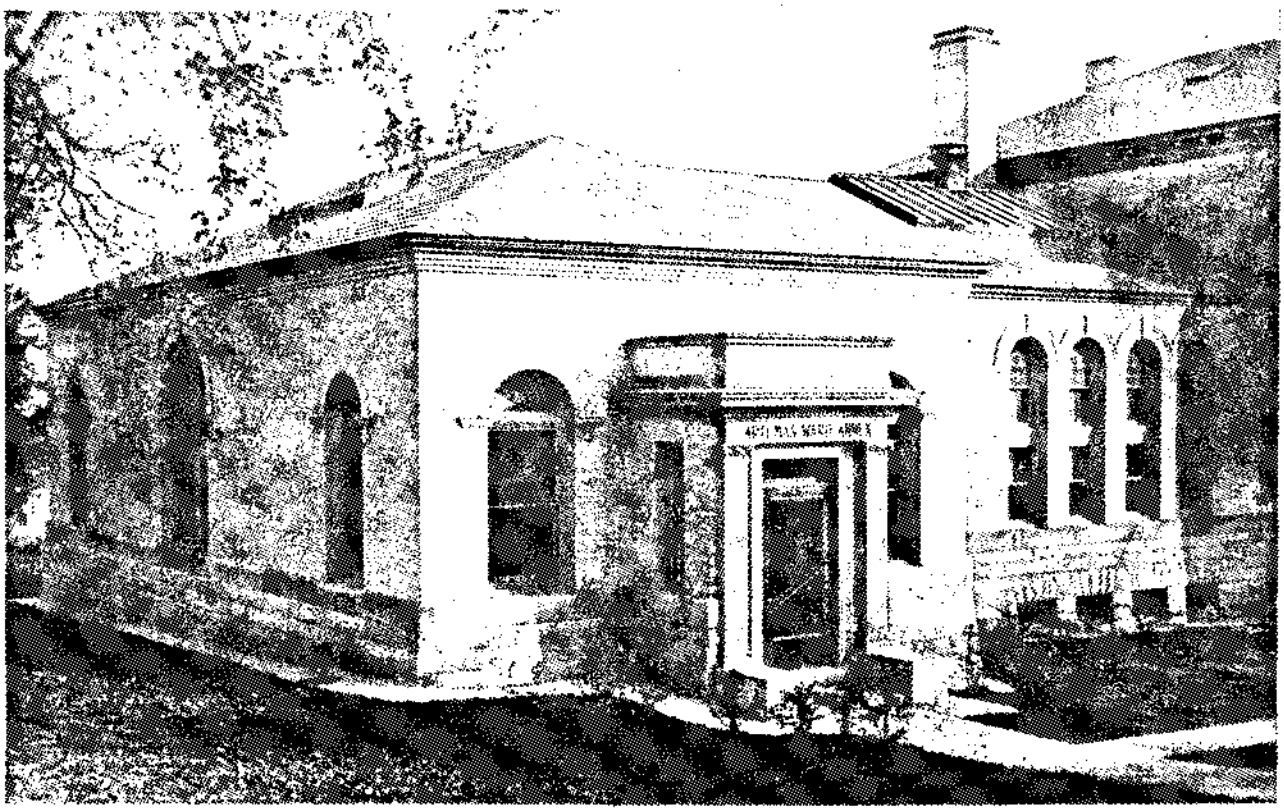

The second portrait, by Raphaelle Peale in 1795, is in the Artemas Ward House. A copy is owned by Mrs. C. A. Page (page 156, footnote).

There are also numerous heirlooms of General Ward, other than letters, owned by descendants.

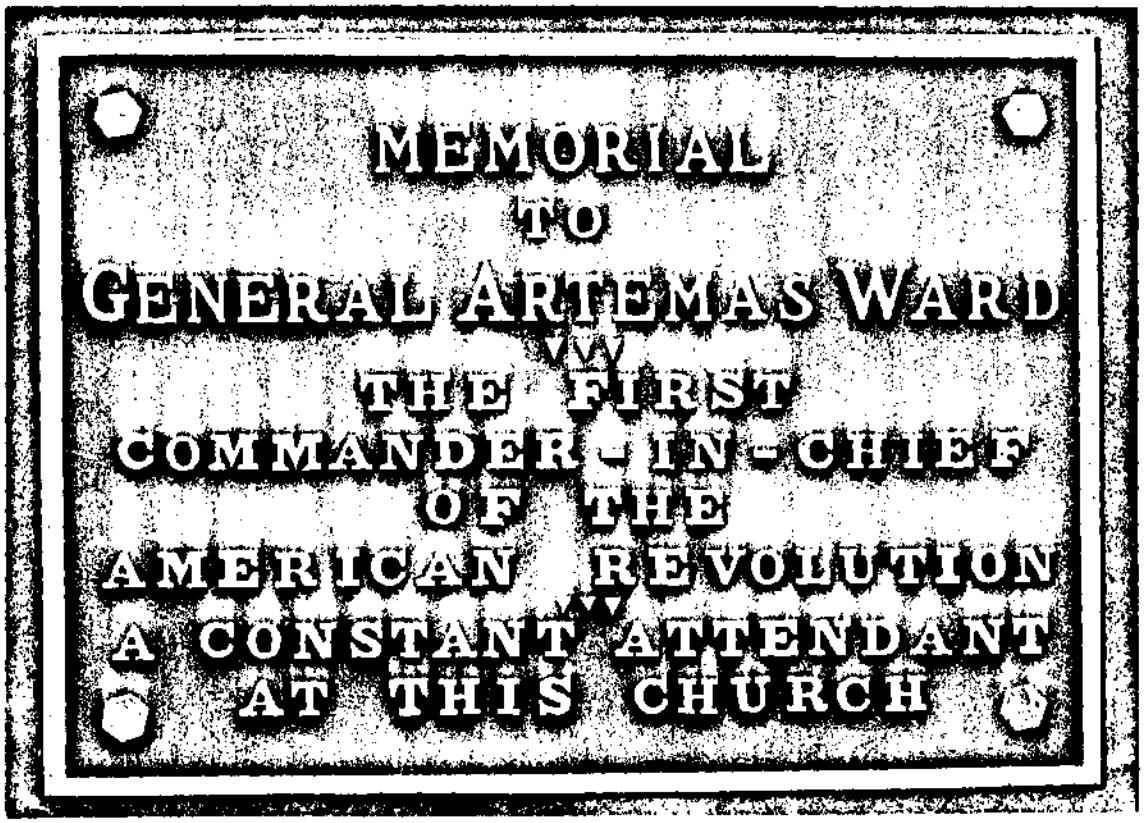

The gavel that he used as Speaker of the Massachusetts House is in the Old State House, Boston, and the Shrewsbury Congregational Church cherishes the silver communion cups that he gave it in 1796.

275. ELISHA WARD,[4] born August 30, 1733, in Shrewsbury, Mass., died December 9, 1802, in Petersham, Mass. He married April 7, 1763 (or perhaps 1762), MARY BALDWIN, born about 1743, died February 23, 1811, daughter of Henry and Abigail (Butler) Baldwin of Shrewsbury.

As a residuary legatee under the will of his father, Colonel Nahum Ward (90), the house which later became famous as the "Artemas Ward House" passed to him together with seventy acres of farm land. In 1763 he sold both to his brother Artemas (274 immediately preceding) and in the same year, or early in the year following, moved to Petersham, which town he twice represented in the legislature.

In 1757 he was recorded as adjutant of the 1st Company, Shrewsbury Alarm List; in 1762 as captain—the regiment then being commanded by his brother Artemas.

Children, born in Petersham, Mass:

582. NAHUM,[5] born June 4, 1764, died October 5, 1822, in Shutesbury, Mass. He married June 3, 1792, DEBORAH GLEASON, daughter of Joseph and Sarah Gleason of Petersham, Mass. No children. His widow married Jotham Walker.

592. PHINEAS, born February 1, 1757.

287. JOHN WARD,[5] born August 12, 1720, in Newton, Mass., died 1805 in Buckland, Mass. He married (intentions, December 21, 1745) MARY TORRY of Mendon, Mass.

They resided for many years upon the line between Mendon and Upton, Mass., part of their dwelling being in each of those towns. In the marriage record he is called of Upton. They moved to Buckland about 1773.

He was a well-to-do farmer, a man of versitality, and more than ordinarily popular in the community.

Children, (in addition to two, between Josiah and Susannah, who died young), born in Upton:

593. JOSIAH,[6] born January 20, 1748.

594. SUSANNAH, born November 29, 1761.

595. LUKE, born April 16, 1763, married September 2, 1786, in Buckland, Mass., MOLLY DAVIS. They resided in Middlefield, O.

596. JEREMIAH, born September 24, 1766.

597. POLLY, born January 11, 1768, married May 26, 1800, in Buckland, Mass., WILLIAM HOOK.

289. DANIEL WARD,[5] born 1732 in Grafton, Mass., died September 12, 1812, in Buckland, Mass. He married HANNAH HARROUN about 1758 or 1759.

During much of the time from 1754 to 1759 he was a soldier in the colony forces. In 1775 he marched on the Crown Point expedition against the French; in 1757 he was one of those "enlisted for service on the Western frontiers" and who "provided their own guns"; in 1759 he joined Amherst's army for the invasion of Canada. At other periods during 1754 to 1759 he was stationed at Colerain, Mass., in which place he married. He is frequently recorded as "centinel." After the close of the French wars he moved to Ashfield, Mass., and thence to Buckland.

Children:

598. CATHERINE,[6] born prior to 1760, in Colerain, Mass., died in Northampton, N. Y. She married JOEL GILLIS.

Up to thirty-seven years of age he was a school-teacher and schoolmaster, chiefly in Boston and other smaller Massachusetts towns. In 1772 he opened an English Grammar School in Boston. He was a skilled writing-master in the days when calligraphy was an art. Several specimens of his handiwork exist in the manuscript collection held in trust by his great-grandchildren Estelle Frances Ward (3067) and George Bradley Ward (3072).

He took part in the Battle of Lexington and Concord and on the following day (April 20, 1775) was appointed secretary and aide-de-camp to the Commander-in-chief by General Heath, who had assumed charge of the militiamen besieging Boston until the arrival of General Artemas Ward on the afternoon of the same day. General Ward confirmed the appointment and Joseph Ward continued as his secretary and aide-de-camp until the General's retirement on March 20, 1777. General Ward's Order Book, now in the Massachusetts Historical Society, is almost entirely in his handwriting.

His next post was as Commissary-General of Musters, with the rank of colonel. During this service—on November 26, 1778—he was taken prisoner by the English and held for several months until his exchange was effected. In February 1780 the office of Commissary of Musters was consolidated with that of Inspector-General of Discipline, and he retired from the service. He was offered the position of Commissary of Prisoners, but did not accept, preferring to go into business in Boston —after 1781 as a real estate dealer and stock-broker.

In 1792 he retired from business and resided for some years in Newton, the town of his birth, representing it in the General Court in 1796, but returned to Boston in 1805 and continued to reside there until his death. In 1807 he was appointed justice of the Court of Common Pleas for Suffolk County.

He married October 13, 1773, in Southborough, SUSANNAH STONE, born May 10, 1741, died 1790, daughter of Samuel and Rebecca (Clark) Stone of Southborough and a descendant of Deacon Gregory Stone of Watertown, Mass., 1635.

He was all his married life a resident of Southborough and many years a magistrate.

His military record also was one to be proud of. In 1762 he was commissioned captain of the Southborough company of Artemas Ward's regiment of Worcester and Middlesex County militia. In 1775, at the outbreak of the Revolution, he was lieutenant-colonel of the same regiment as reorganized under the direction of the Provincial Congress, and on the Lexington and Concord alarm he marched to Cambridge with several of its companies. After his arrival his right to the post of lieutenant-colonel was disputed by Joseph Henshaw, who (also with the rank of lieutenant-colonel) had brought down the minute-men of the regiment, but the Provincial Congress decided in Ward's favor. Upon the organization of Massachusetts field regiments to continue the siege of Boston, he became colonel.

During the morning of the day of the "Battle of Bunker Hill," his regiment was one of those retained at Cambridge to guard the American center. Shortly after noon it was moved to Lechmere's Point to meet any attempt of the English generals to attack the center by way of Willis Creek. Later, when the English movements rendered such an attack improbable, he was ordered to the Charlestown Peninsula to reënforce the American troops at "Bunker Hill" (Breed's Hill).

Washburn's "History of Leicester, Mass.," and A. H. Ward's "History of Shrewsbury, Mass.," have the story of the halting of Jonathan Ward's regiment on the mainland side of Charlestown Neck by a horseman who declared (Washburn's "Leicester") "that orders had been sent that no more troops should go into action." Part of the regiment, nevertheless, in defiance of the order, marched across the Neck toward the battlefield in time to help cover the retreat from the redoubt, and Colonel Ward went with them. According to tradition the horseman referred to was Dr. Benjamin Church, then high in patriot councils but later convicted of treasonable correspondence with the enemy, but other circumstances make this identification improbable.

On the formation of the Continental Army, Jonathan Ward was commissioned colonel of the 32nd Regiment and the following year (1776) of the 21st Regiment.

They resided in Westborough, Mass., until February 1766, when they moved to New Marlborough, Mass., and thence in 1775 to Poultney, Vt., settling in the upper part of Finel Hollow.

He was one of the first settlers in Poultney and a member of the irregular Revolutionary troops which resisted step by step the progress of General Burgoyne's army, and aided in its capture. In the meantime his wife found herself and her helpless children in danger from England's savage allies, come within a few miles of her dwelling. She fled to Bennington with her children, carrying the youngest in her arms, more than forty miles on foot through a wilderness, guided only by blazed trees. They reached their destination in safety, the "Battle of Bennington" and the surrender of Burgoyne following soon after. The family then returned to their home in Poultney.

He was a member of the convention which framed the constitution of the state of Vermont; judge of the County Court of Rutland County for six years; judge of the Probate Court for the District of Fairhaven for twenty-two years; justice of the peace for forty years; representative in the state legislature for eighteen years; and deacon for nearly forty years.

576. SARAH WARD,[5] born July 28, 1756, in Shrewsbury, Mass., died February 3, 1838, in Westborough, Mass. She married (as his third wife) December 16, 1792, the Honorable ELIJAH BRIGHAM of Westborough, born July 7, 1751, in Westborough, died February 22, 1816, in Washington, D. C., son of Colonel Levi and Susanna (Grout) Brigham.

He was a graduate of Dartmouth College, B.A., 1778, and Dartmouth, Harvard, and Yale, M.A. He studied law, but never applied for admission to the bar, instead settling in Westborough as a merchant. He became a very prominent man—twice representative and executive-councilor and twelve terms a senator in the General Court; and a member of the United States Congress from 1810 to the date of his death. He served also three years as a selectman and sixteen years as a justice of the Court of Common Pleas.

Children, born in Westborough, Mass:

1324. ANNA MARIA,[6] born July 14, 1794, died December 14, 1880, in Westborough, Mass. She married October 12, 1818, in Westborough, EBENEZER MORGAN PHILLIPS, born February 19, 1792, died May 1, 1880, in Westborough, son of Dr. Ebenezer Humphrey and Ruth (Morgan) Phillips and great-great-great-grandson of the Reverend George Phillips, who came to America in the summer of 1630 as chaplain of the "Arbella", flagship of Winthrop's fleet.

He was for thirty years Westborough agent of the Boston and Worcester, and Boston and Albany railroads.

CHILDREN: Elijah Brigham,[7]* Harriet Maria.†

1325. SARAH ("SALLY") SOPHRONIA, born December 22, 1795, died December 3, 1810.

1328. CATHARINE MARTHA, born January 21, 1801, died July 24, 1881, in De Witt, Ia. She married February 18, 1830, in Lunenburg, Mass., GEORGE HENRY LOWE, born May 12, 1803, in Ashburnham, Mass., died September 21, 1866, in De Witt, son of Dr. Abraham and Charlotte (Hale) Lowe.

He was a merchant residing successively in Ashburnham, Fitchburg, and North Brookfield, Mass., and De Witt, Ia. He served as a selectman of North Brookfield for several years.

CHILDREN: Emma Catharine,[7] George Abraham,‡ Susan Brigham.

577. THOMAS WALTER WARD,[5] born August 10, 1758, in Shrewsbury, Mass., died August 20, 1835, in Shrewsbury. He married November 28, 1782, ELIZABETH DENNY, born March 1, 1760, in Leicester, Mass., died November 18, 1846, in Shrewsbury, daughter of Colonel Samuel and Elizabeth (Henshaw) Denny.

During the Revolution he served in Asa Rice's company of Job Cushing's regiment, which marched for Manchester, Vt., July 27, 1777,

* His son, HENRY ATLING PHILLIPS, a Boston architect residing in Millbury, Mass., made in 1902 a set of plans and elevations of the Artemas Ward House, Shrewsbury, Mass. Photographic reproductions are in the Artemas Ward House Album and in the collections of the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities. Mr. Phillips's collections include also a portrait of Sarah Ward (576, above), General Artemas Ward's scarlet cloak, several chairs and a mirror from the General's household, and a trunk left behind by a British officer in the bustle and hurry of the evacuation of Boston and later bid in at auction by the General.

† She married the Reverend EDWARD W. CLARK. Their adopted son, FRANCIS EDWARD CLARK, is founder and president of the Christian Endeavor Societies, and a noted editor and writer. His collections include pieces of General Ward's uniform, his secretary, desk-chair, trunk-box, fire-screen, and andirons; a piece of the baptismal robe of Sarah Trowbridge, the General's wife, a piece of one of her dresses, and pewter plates from her wedding dowry.

The portrait of General Ward which she—HARRIET MARIA (PHILLIPS) CLARK—inherited from her mother is now owned by her niece, MRS. C. A. PAGE, in the stead of the latter's only son, PHILLIPS WARD PAGE, who lost his life in a seaplane accident off Felixstone, England, December 17, 1917, the first Harvard man to be killed in the United States service on the other side during the World War.

on the alarm raised by the progress of Burgoyne's English army, and was on guard there or in Bennington at the time of the "Battle of Bennington." In 1779 he was in Isaac Harrington's company, Samuel Denny's regiment. He was also a member of Crafts's cavalry regiment which took part in the suppression of Shays' Rebellion early in 1787.

He was sheriff of Worcester County for eighteen years; many terms moderator and treasurer of the township; a justice of the peace, and a special judge of the Court of Common Pleas.

Shortly after his marriage, he moved into the old Tomblin (Tombolin) house, which his father, General Artemas Ward, had purchased in the preceding year, but after the completion of the "New Part" of the Artemas Ward House in 1785, he returned and made his home there, occupying the old part and his parents the new.

He owned a considerable amount of farming property in Shrewsbury and two farms in Phillipston, Mass.

Children, born in Shrewsbury, Mass:

1329. ANDREW HENSHAW,[6] born May 26, 1784.

1330. NAHUM, born October 23, 1785.

1331. HARRIET, born October 6, 1787.

1332. JOSEPH, born August 18, 1789, died October 2, 1821, in Shrewsbury, Mass. Unmarried.

1333. ARTEMAS, born March 21, 1791, died December 31, 1816. In 1815 he was ensign of a rifle company attached to the 2nd Regiment of Worcester County militia. Unmarried.

1335. HENRY DANA, born January 13, 1797.

1336. THOMAS WALTER, born November 27, 1798.

1337. SARAH HENSHAW, born November 3, 1800, died June 30, 1894, in Shrewsbury, Mass. She married October 3, 1824, BENJAMIN PERKINS PUTNAM of Marietta, O., born about 1800, died January 2, 1825. Following the death of her husband after only three months of married life she returned to Shrewsbury and remained a widow until her death nearly seventy years later.

1338. CAROLINE, born January 28, 1802.

579. ARTEMAS WARD,[5] born January 9, 1762, in Shrewsbury, Mass., died October 7, 1847, in Boston. He married December 18, 1788, CATHERINE MARIA DEXTER, born April 11, 1760, in Boston, died March 11, 1818, in Boston, daughter of the Honorable Samuel and Hannah (Sigourney) Dexter. Concerning the founder of the Dexter Family in America, see under Ephraim Ward (303).

As lawyer, judge, and statesman, he attained high distinction.

He graduated from Harvard, B.A., 1783, and for a number of years up to 1800 conducted a law office in Weston, Mass., in partnership with his brother-in-law Samuel Dexter (also famous as a lawyer and Secretary of War in John Adams's cabinet). In addition he held various local offices, served as captain of an Independent Light Infantry company, and four times represented the town in the General Court. In 1800 he moved to Charlestown, Mass., residing there for ten years and sitting as a member of the Executive Council in 1803–1805, 1808, and 1809.

In 1810 he transferred his home to Boston and remained there for the concluding thirty-seven years of his life. In 1811 he was a representative from Boston to the General Court; 1813–1815 representative in the United States Congress; 1818 and 1819 in the Massachusetts Senate; and 1820 a delegate to the convention to revise the state constitution.

In 1819 he was made judge of the Boston Court of Common Pleas, continuing until its abolition in 1821, then being appointed chief justice of the Court of Common Pleas, which post he held until 1839.

He received the degree of LL.D. from Harvard in 1842 and was for thirty-four years a member of its Board of Overseers.

He was strongly opposed to the war with England 1812–1814 and two of his speeches in Congress on its conduct and proposed legislation, achieved wide circulation in pamphlet form. Of his record in Congress, Sullivan's "Public Men of the Revolution," published 1847, said "Artemas Ward (now Chief Justice of the Common Pleas) was the worthy successor of Mr. Quincy. He was present at the trying scenes which occurred in the latter time of the war in the House of Representatives. The speeches of this gentleman were grateful to his constituents as they showed him to be most diligent and faithful in maintaining their constitutional rights, and in resisting the dangerous encroachments of power."

He accumulated a considerable fortune. Among his loans is one of $5,000 to General Henry Knox on mortgage. In "Our First Men," 1846, he is rated as worth $200,000, a large sum in those days. The accompanying biographical lines note that he was then "a very old man" and also that he "commenced practice about the time of Shays' rebellion, when the lawyers used to ride the circuits with pistols in their pockets."

His portrait, opposite, is from a painting in the possession of Rebecca Langdon (Prince) Lamson, 2738.

Children, born in Weston, Mass:

1339. SAMUEL DEXTER,[6] born October 24, 1789, died May 28, 1871. He graduated from Yale, B.A., 1809, was a counselor-at-law and resided in Boston. Unmarried.

1340. CATHERINE MARIA, baptized July 24, 1791, died March 7, 1877. She married November 16, 1824, SAMUEL B. BARRELL, a graduate of Yale, 1809, and a counselor-at-law in Boston. It is by her gift and that of her brothers and sisters that the Massachusetts Historical Society possesses the commission of General Artemas Ward as Commander-in-Chief of the Massachusetts forces in the early days of the War of the American Revolution, and other valuable Ward manuscripts.

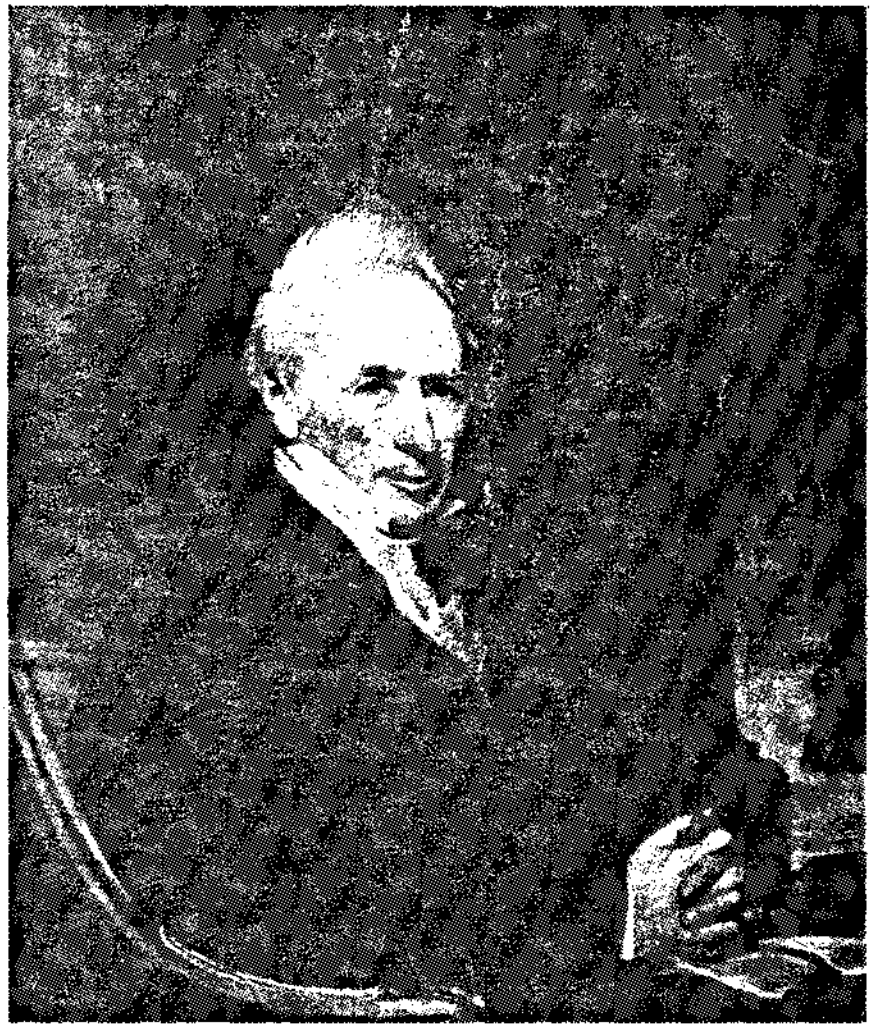

1341. FRANCES FIDELIA, born September 9, 1793.

1342. HENRY ARTEMAS, baptized August 23, 1795, died 1870. He graduated from Harvard, B.A., 1816, M.D., 1832. He resided in Boston. Unmarried.

1345. CHARLES TROWBRIDGE, born December 17, 1806.

ARTEMAS WARD (579)

A noted lawyer and judge, son of General Artemas Ward.

580. MARIA WARD,[5] born December 12, 1764, in Shrewsbury, Mass., died October 6, 1833. She was first engaged to Joseph Henshaw of Middletown, Conn., but before the wedding date arrived he was lost in a shipwreck off Guadaloupe. Between two and three years later, January 14, 1790, in Middletown, she married Dr. EBENEZER TRACY, born November 11, 1762, in Norwich, Conn., son of Samuel and Sibyl (Lathrop) Tracy, and great-great-grandson of Thomas Tracy who arrived in Salem, Mass., in 1636, himself the son of Sir Paul Tracy, Baronet, Stoneway, Gloucester County, England.

Among Maria Ward's accomplishments was that of ventriloquism. A story has been handed down that on one occasion, on a dark and stormy night as the lone passenger in a stage-coach, she frightened off a party of highwaymen by keeping up an imaginary conversation of gruff male voices inside the coach all the time that it was passing through the wilder part of the route where it was (correctly) suspected that they lay in ambush.

A number of her letters to her father, General Artemas Ward, and his letters to her have been preserved. Some are in the Artemas Ward Manuscripts in the Massachusetts Historical Society. Others are owned by Mrs. Thomas E. (Maria Van Velsor Rogers) Will, Washington, D. C., granddaughter of Maria Ward (Tracy) Barnes (1346, below) by her daughter Catherine Steele; and by Mrs. Frank Chauncey Whittelsey, Flushing, N. Y., widow of the grandson of Sarah Lathrop (Tracy) Whittelsey (1347, below) by her son Franklin Ward.

Children, born in Middletown, Conn:

1346. MARIA WARD,[6] born December 7, 1790, died April 30, 1873, in Middletown, Conn. She married April 29, 1819, in Middletown, JONATHAN BARNES, born November 21, 1779, in Tolland, Conn., died December 24, 1861, in Middletown, son of Jonathan and Rachel (Steele) Barnes of Tolland.

He was a graduate of Yale, B.A., 1810, a lawyer of prominence, and a profound scholar. He read fluently ten languages, and wrote and translated many important papers.

CHILDREN: Jane Randolph,[7] Emily Tracy, Maria Eliza, Catherine Steele, Jonathan Ebenezer, Henry Ward.

1347. SARAH LATHROP, born August 6, 1792, married April 14, 1818, CHAUNCEY WHITTELSEY of Middletown, Conn., born June 18, 1783, died December 24, 1834, in Middletown, son of Chauncey and Lucy (Wetmore) Whittelsey.

He was a graduate of Yale, B.A., 1800, and a counselor-at-law. He served as major under Lieutenant-Colonel Tim Shepard in the War of 1812 and was an active militia officer, rising to the rank of general.

CHILDREN: Charles Chauncey,[7] Henry Ward, Maria Tracy, Ebenezer Tracy, Franklin Ward, Lucy Alsop.

1348. LYDIA, born April 14, 1794, died September 12, 1799.

1351. ELIZA ANN, born April 27, 1799, married her cousin HENRY DANA ARTEMAS WARD (1356).

1352. JANE CAROLINE, born July 7, 1801, died September 28, 1817.

1353. SAMUEL FRANKLIN, born September 10, 1805, married January 13, 1835, MARIA DE LOS ANGELES AREVELLO.

CHILDREN: Maria de los Angeles,[7] Maria de los Mercedes, Joseph Charles Samuel, Josephine Caroline Eliza, Henry Franklin, Maria Christina, Julia Elvira, Clorinda Emily.

1354. CAROLINE, born January 22, 1806, died April 5, 1833. She married April 15, 1832, CYRUS L. WATSON of Rushville, Ill.

1355. EMILY, born October 6, 1808, died March 9, 1897.

581. HENRY DANA WARD,[5] born February 6, 1768, in Shrewsbury, Mass., died August 23, 1817, in Middletown, Conn., while on a visit to friends. He married (1) July 17, 1798, in Camden, S. C., MARIA ELIZA SMITH, born about 1782, died in 1802, daughter of John and Margaret (Brisbane) Smith. He took a second wife a few years later and survived her also.

He graduated from Harvard College, B.A., 1791, studied law and was admitted to the bar. In the fall of 1794 he went South, first to Charleston and then to Orangeburg, S. C., where he settled and established a lucrative practise as attorney-at-law, also serving several terms in the legislature. He maintained a regular correspondence with his father, General Artemas Ward, and a number of the letters have been preserved. Some are in the Artemas Ward Manuscripts in the Massachusetts Historical Society, Boston, and several (from the General) are owned by Dr. Maria Whittelsey Norris, Grand Rapids, Mich., a descendant of the General's daughter Maria (580).

His first wife's mother married (2) Dr. Isaac Alexander, a prominent physician of Camden, and the latter settled upon her an estate of land and other property. The greater part of this, including the historic Blue House, Camden, several slaves, etc., she bequeathed to her grandson, Henry Dana Artemas Ward (1356, below).

Child, first marriage:

1356. HENRY DANA ARTEMAS,[6] born May 31, 1800, in Orangeburg, S. C.

583. WILLIAM WARD,[5] born June 8, 1767, in Petersham, Mass., died December 10, 1827. He married in 1796 SUSANNAH SANDERSON of Petersham. She died April 27, 1829.

He graduated from Dartmouth College, B.A., 1826, studied theology at Andover Theological Seminary and the Yale University School of Religion, and was ordained and installed over the First Congregational Church of Abington, Mass., in 1834. He resided also for a time in Madison, Wis., and Davenport, Ia., and the last ten years of his life in Lakeville, Mass. He served three terms in the Massachusetts House and one in the Senate.

It is worthy of remark that his first three children read the Old Testament through in the original Hebrew, the daughter having done so before she was nine years old. The fourth child read it nearly half through, and as he read, translated it into English with perfect ease.

In the Shrewsbury, Mass., library is a glass table-case donated by Artemas Ward (2722) in memory of these four children. It displays a Polyglot Bible (two huge volumes with both testaments in eight languages—Hebrew, Greek, English, Latin, German, Italian, French, Spanish) and between them, in striking contrast, one of the smallest Bibles in the world—its pages only 1½ inches by 1⅞ inches, and the volume itself only five-eighths of an inch thick. This miniature Bible is chained to a miniature lectern or reading desk, a reduced facsimile of the chained Bible and lectern still to be seen in English cathedrals and parish churches—reminiscent of earlier generations when printed books were fewer and a great deal more costly than in our twentieth century.

He spent his boyhood in Somers where he is said to have been bound out to a farmer after his mother's second marriage. He nex appears at Westfield, Mass., as a private in a company of minute-men commanded by Lieutenant John Shepard, which marched April 20, 1775, in response to the alarm of April 19. From that date he was almost continuously in the army until the end of the Revolutionary War. Except three months of 1775 in Captain Warham Park's company,

Timothy Danielson's regiment, he served most of the time as private and corporal in Captain Lebbeus Ball's company, William Shepard's regiment. His army knapsack, wooden canteen, some grapeshot, and a curious three-pronged screw-driver that he carried in several campaigns have descended to the possession of his grandson, David Ward (3362).

At the close of the war, Abner went to his brother Peter's at Hopkinton, Mass., and the next year married his brother's wife's sister (as noted above). From Massachusetts they moved to Rupert, Vt., and then to New York State where they lived for a time near Schuylerville, Saratoga County. They came to Scipio, N. Y. in 1811, and in the following year he purchased the farm in eastern Scipio two miles south of Ensenore which is today known as the "Old Ward homestead" (see further under Hiram Ward, 1861, and his sons William W. and David Ward).

Abner is buried in the old family cemetery on an adjoining farm owned by Mrs. Jennie Ward, widow of Abner's grandson, Charles Ward (3359). His widow lies with the Beardsleys (the family of their daughter Harriet's husband) in the North Lansing, N. Y., Cemetery. Her family Bible is owned by Frederick A. Ward (4913). Its pages bear evidence to its daily use for many years. Some of them are nearly worn through.

Mass., and great-great-granddaughter of Joshua Henshaw of Dorchester, Mass., 1653.

He graduated from Harvard College, B.A., 1808, and was admitted to the bar in 1811, then for a number of years practising law in his home town of Shrewsbury, and serving several terms as town clerk and selectman.

In May 1829 he moved to Boston to enter the customs service, continuing in it for nearly a quarter of a century with the exception of a short interim on the incoming of the Tyler administration. In 1853 he sat as delegate from Newton in the state convention for revising the constitution of Massachusetts. In 1837 he was appointed United States Commissioner of Insolvency for Massachusetts. He was a justice of the peace for Worcester County, twenty-one years; of Suffolk County, fourteen; and of Middlesex county, twenty-one.

All descendants of William Ward of Sudbury—as also all descendants of the early residents of Shrewsbury other than Wards—rest under obligation to his genealogical researches and publications. When first elected town clerk of Shrewsbury he found the books of births, marriages, and deaths in a broken and perishing condition, and very deficient in entries. To rectify this, he compiled a new book, transcribing into it all the vital records contained in the old volumes, and adding from the graveyard and other sources, the names of 188 persons who had not appeared on the records. These exceeded by more than one-third the number that had been recorded during nearly a century.

This work stimulated his interest in local history and genealogy and resulted in the compilation and publication of three important books: "A History of the Town of Shrewsbury," which appeared in 1847; the "Ward Family" the line of William Ward of Sudbury, the precursor of the work in the reader's hands, published in 1851; and the "Rice Family."

Mr. Ward was also one of the first members of the New England Historic Genealogical Society, and a frequent contributor to its Register, and one of the originators of the Massachusetts system of "Poor Farms" which took the place of the system common to many country towns of that period of auctioning the poor to the lowest bidders.

Children, all except the last born in Shrewsbury:

2697. Sarah Ann Henshaw,[7] born September 28, 1809.

2698. William, born July 16, 1812.

2699. Joseph Walter, born July 22, 1814.

2700. John Tucker, born January 4, 1816, died November 2, 1840, in Boston. He was one of the firm of Henshaw, Ward & Co.

2701. Eliza Maria Antoinette, born February 8, 1818, died October 16, 1821.

2702. Frances Caroline Augusta, born February 2, 1820, died October 23, 1821.

2703. Frances Antoinette Elizabeth, born April 19, 1822.

2704. Andrew Henshaw, born January 28, 1824.

2705. David Henshaw, born June 23, 1830, in Boston, married July 5, 1855, Julia Frances Noble, daughter of Joseph and Sarah (Hedge) Noble of New York City. He was a graduate of Harvard, B.A., 1853 and resided for a number of years in Keene, N. H.

1330. NAHUM WARD,[6] born October 23, 1785, in Shrewsbury, Mass., died April 6, 1860, in Marietta, O. He married (1) October 21, 1817, in Marietta, SARAH CATHERINE C. SKINNER, born August 15, 1796, died August 4, 1844, daughter of William Skinner of Marietta.

He married (2) January 4, 1848, his cousin HARRIET DENNY, born December 1, 1805, in Worcester, Mass., died June 16, 1872, in Boston, daughter of Daniel and Nancy (Watson) Denny.

He moved to Marietta in 1811—when the greater part of Ohio was a wilderness—and made it his home for half a century, accumulating a large fortune in operations in the land of the "Ohio Company," more than 100,000 acres of it passing through his hands. His investments took root in several counties, but were chiefly centered in Marietta and its vicinity—where at one time he had so many as 131 tenants clearing and cultivating farms under his proprietorship.

The city honored him by electing him mayor in 1835 and several times re-elected him by handsome majorities.

He will be especially remembered in the history of the state by his attempt to colonize with Scotch immigrants. He crossed the ocean in June 1822 and succeeded in bringing back with him 175 immigrants and their families. Descendants of many of them are still living on the farms they obtained from him, and a small pamphlet that he published in Glasgow to advertise the possibilities of Ohio is today described as "One of the rarest pamphlets relating to the State." A single copy was sold at auction a few years ago for $65.

The beautiful Unitarian Church of Marietta, dedicated June 4, 1857, was his unaided personal gift—founded, built, and endowed by him.

His portrait opposite is from a painting in the possession of Agnes (Ward) White, 4385.

Mrs. Ward the second is said to have revolutionized society in Marietta by her culture and social energy, and many admiring stories concerning her have been handed down.

Children, first marriage, born in Marietta:

2706. SARAH CATHERINE,[7] born March 18, 1819.

2707. ANN MARIA SKINNER, born September 30, 1820, died August 11, 1839.

2708. WILLIAM SKINNER, born February 12, 1822.

2709. MARY ELIZABETH, born August 7, 1824.

2710. GEORGE W. LAFAYETTE, born September 9, 1825, died August 27, 1826.

2711. HARRIET CAROLINE, born November 6, 1826, died March 21, 1917, in Marietta, O. She married November 27, 1851, GOODRICH H. BARBOUR, a business man of Cincinnati, O. He died December 19, 1901, in Cincinnati. No children.

2712. HENRIETTA DANA, born March 31, 1830.

1331. HARRIET WARD,[6] born October 6, 1787, in Shrewsbury, Mass., died November 13, 1824, in Shrewsbury. She married May 19, 1817, WILLIAM WILLIAMS of Pomfret, Conn. He went to Marietta, O., about 1832.

NAHUM WARD (1330)

An early settler of Marietta, O., and one of its largest land operators

Children:

2713. ARTEMAS WARD,[7] born March 2, 1818. He resided in Ohio.

2714. WILLIAM GARDINER, born February 27, 1820.

2715. THOMAS WALTER, born March 24, 1822.

1334. ELIZABETH DENNY WARD,[6] born September 25, 1793, in Shrewsbury, Mass., died March 14, 1887. She married May 26, 1817, Captain NATHAN BALDWIN of Shrewsbury, born September 24, 1790, died January 26, 1850, son of Captain Henry and Azubah (Keyes) Baldwin.

Children:

2716. CATHERINE MARIA,[7] born January 6, 1818, married May 31, 1838, THOMAS LYON of Northborough, Mass., born about 1812, died December 15, 1850, in Shrewsbury, Mass. She married (2) L. B. WITHERBY.

2717. HENRY WALTER, born January 5, 1820, died November 16, 1864, in Shrewsbury, Mass. He married June 14, 1850, LOUISA B. NOURSE, born September 21, 1824, daughter of Theophilus Nourse of Berlin, Vt.

2718. CHARLES SMITH, born May 22, 1823, died young.

2719. JAMES HAMMOND, born March 18, 1836, in Shrewsbury, Mass., died November 11, 1894, in Washington, D. C. He served in the Civil War as lieutenant in the 35th Massachusetts Volunteers and as lieutenant and captain in the Massachusetts Heavy Artillery. After the conclusion of peace he joined the regular army by appointment as second lieutenant and rose to the grade of captain. He was buried in the National Cemetery at Arlington. He married and had two daughters.

1335. HENRY DANA WARD,[6] born January 13, 1797, in Shrewsbury, Mass., died February 29, 1884, in Philadelphia. He married (1) ABIGAIL PORTER JONES, daughter of Samuel Jones of Lebanon Springs, N. Y. She died December 23, 1837, in New York City.

He married (2) May 26, 1842, in Fairfax County, Va., CHARLOTTE GALBRAITH, born March 7, 1807, in Dublin, Ireland, died February 19, 1887, in Philadelphia, daughter of Richard and Rebecca (Allen) Galbraith.

Mr. Ward graduated from Harvard University, B.A., 1816, M.A., 1819, and was subsequently ordained a minister of the Episcopal Church. It was while in charge of a small parish in Charleston, W. Va., that he met and married his second wife, mother of his children, and daughter of an old Scotch-Irish family residing in Dublin. Their dispositions by inheritance and training in New England and Ireland respectively were in strong contrast. He was a tall, handsome, serious Christian gentleman with a mind fixed less on this world than on the next, whereas she, without such personal beauty, was the possessor of a more practical and vigorous mind. She had been instructed in the accomplishments expected of young ladies in that day. She could play the harp and piano; was well acquainted with the French and Italian languages; and had acquired considerable skill in drawing.

After meeting for some years the increasing expenses of a growing family on a fixed stipend, they turned for relief, quite naturally in view of their training, to the profession of teaching and moved to New York

City, where they opened a school for girls and continued in that career until they retired and moved to Philadelphia, living there until their deaths on a very modest competence.

Mr. Ward occupied his later days in religious studies, publishing "The Gospel of the Kingdom," "The Faith of Abraham," and "The History of the Cross," while his wife, quite indifferent to anybody or anything out of her own household, devoted herself with fierce Irish affection to her children, for whom no sacrifice was too great to be made. At the end of a long life each well deserved the fulfillment of the promise, "Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God."

Children, second marriage:

2720. HENRY DANA ARTEMAS,[7] born March 9, 1843, in New York City, died February 25, 1851.

2721. CHARLOTTE ELIZABETH, born December 6, 1845, in Charleston, W. Va., died January 16, 1923, in New York City.

2722. ARTEMAS, born May 20, 1848, in New York City.

2723. HENRY GALBRAITH, born April 19, 1851, in New York City.

1336. THOMAS WALTER WARD,[6] born November 27, 1798, in Shrewsbury, Mass., died July 2, 1890, in Shrewsbury. He married April 6, 1825, in Pomfret, Conn., HARRIET P. GROSVENOR, daughter of Charles and Rebecca (Plympton) Grosvenor, and a descendant of John Grosvenor of Cheshire County, England, and of Roxbury, Mass., at least as early as 1672.

He taught school in Phillipston and Sutton, Mass., for a short time, then went to Boston as clerk in the store of his cousin, Daniel Denny, staying with him until 1824 when he started in business for himself. He found his location unsatisfactory, and learning of an opportunity in Pomfret, Conn., he moved his stock there and opened a store. This venture proved successful and he married and became prominent in the community. He returned to Shrewsbury, however, in 1829 in order to take charge of the farms owned by his father, the sheriff, who was too much occupied with county business to be able to give them proper attention himself. Thenceforward his life was entirely of Shrewsbury. He was a magistrate for a number of years and active in local anti-slavery and temperance movements.

Children, all except the first born in Shrewsbury, Mass:

2724. SAMUEL DENNY,[7] born April 3, 1826, in Pomfret, Conn.

2725. ARTEMAS, born July 16, 1828, died October 29, 1838, in Shrewsbury, Mass.

2726. CHARLES GROSVENOR, born December 30, 1829, died May 16, 1864. On the outbreak of the Civil War, he was mustered into the service as second lieutenant of Company H, 24th Massachusetts Volunteers, the favorite regiment of the City of Boston, where he had resided for some years previous. He was promoted to the first lieutenancy June 27, 1863, and assigned to duty as adjutant of his regiment. After participating unharmed in sixteen of the great engagements of the war, he was killed at the battle of Drewry's Bluff.

2727. ELLEN GROSVENOR, born January 18, 1832.

2728. THOMAS WALTER, born July 6, 1834.

2729. ELIZABETH, born December 8, 1840, died April 12, 1900, in Shrewsbury, Mass. She was the author of "Old Times in Shrewsbury," a clever little work which recorded and perpetuated many a delightful morsel of local history and tradition. Unmarried.

2730. HARRIET, born June 27, 1843, died July 28, 1909, in Shrewsbury, Mass. She was the last to have her home in the Artemas Ward House. Its consecration since her death to the memory of the General would be pleasing to her, for she was intensely enamored of its associations and always fearful that the future might profane or submerge them. Unmarried.

1338. CAROLINE WARD,[6] born January 28, 1802, in Shrewsbury, Mass., died November 9, 1869. She married December 30, 1830, in Shrewsbury, BENJAMIN P. DIX, a merchant of Groton, Mass., born August 27, 1793, in Littleton, Mass., died December 30, 1881, son of Benjamin and Sarah (Russell) Dix, and a direct descendant of Anthony Dix who arrived in Plymouth in 1623 by the ship "Ann."

Children, born in Groton:

2731. BENJAMIN WARD,[7] born March 16, 1833, died July 28, 1898. He married June 19, 1862, in Boston, HARRIET ELIZABETH EDMANDS, born April 1, 1835, in Boston, died January 5, 1910, daughter of Benjamin Franklin and Catherine (Rayner) Edmands.

He was in business first in Worcester, Mass., and then in Boston. In 1870 he moved to New York and became widely known in the wholesale dry-goods trade of the metropolis.

MRS. DIX was prominent in Unitarian Church circles in Brooklyn, N. Y., where they resided after 1873.

CHILD: Roza Sprague.[8]*

2732. SARAH ELIZABETH, born October 31, 1834, died November 23, 1912, in Cambridge, Mass. She married April 29, 1869, FRANCIS DAVIS FISHER of Westborough, Mass., born February 13, 1847, in Westborough, son of Samuel Deane and Eliza Ann (Davis) Fisher.

He is a civil engineer. In recent years he has divided his time chiefly between his homes in Pasadena, Cal., and Atlantic City, N. J. He recently donated all his Ward Manuscripts (among them being six letters to General Artemas Ward from George Washington and his aide-de-camps) to the Massachusetts Historical Society for inclusion in the Artemas Ward Manuscripts.

CHILDREN: Caroline Ward,[8] Katharine R., Margaret Davis, Bertha Deane, Isabel Dix.

2733. HENRY DANA, born January 18, 1838, married June 17, 1884, SARAH CLAPP, daughter of Wales Tilestone and Elizabeth Clapp of Greenfield, Mass. He died February 22, 1904. He was a clergyman.

CHILD: Henry Ward.[8]

2734. ALFRED PERKINS, born December 12, 1839, died July 7, 1920, at York Harbor, Me. He married October 18, 1866, EMILY FRANCES CARRUTH (4352), born February 28, 1845, in Boston. He was the head of the brokerage firm of Dix and Phyfe.

CHILDREN: Marion Washburn,[8] Alfred Carruth, Benjamin Ward, Emily, Mildred Carruth.

* She married February 28, 1883, CHARLES ZEBEON SOUTHARD, who survives her. She died March 16, 1924, in her home in Groton, Mass., in the same bed in which General Artemas Ward had passed away one hundred and twenty-four years earlier. She bequeathed to her husband her collection of manuscripts and other heirlooms, including more than twoscore Ward Manuscripts (among them letters to General Ward from George Washington and his aide-de-camps, and from General Horatio Gates and divers colonial authorities), and the General Ward bed and other articles of furniture that had come down from the General. Mr. Southard donated the letters of the period of General Ward's military career to the Massachusetts Historical Society for incorporation in the volumes of the Artemas Ward Manuscripts.

2735. HARRIET CAROLINE, born September 2, 1842, died December 30, 1892, in Elwyn, Pa. She married September 7, 1865, in Groton, Mass., DR. ISAAC NEWTON KERLIN of Philadelphia, born 1834 in Burlington, N. J., son of Joseph and Anne (Ware) Kerlin.

Dr. Kerlin was Superintendent of the Pennsylvania Training School for Feeble-Minded Children in Elwyn, Pa., 1863 to 1893.

CHILDREN: John Ware Sharpless,[1] Isaac Newton, Alfred Dix, Ward Dix,* Thaddeus Leavitt.

1341. FRANCES FIDELIA WARD,[6] born September 9, 1793, in Weston, Mass., died November 29, 1881, in Dedham, Mass. She married July 11, 1825, the Reverend ALVAN LAMSON of Weston, born November 18, 1792, in Weston, died July 18, 1864, in Dedham.

He graduated from Harvard, S.H.S., 1814, was ordained at Dedham, 1818, and received the degree of D.D. from Harvard in 1837. He served the first parish of Dedham for forty-two years—the same parish as that entrusted in 1724 to his wife's great-grandfather, the Reverend Samuel Dexter.

Children, born in Dedham, Mass:

2736. CATHERINE MARIE,[7] born May 6, 1826, died September 1911 in London. She lived abroad twenty-seven years, making her home in London. Unmarried.

2737. FRANCES ARTEMISIA, born March 24, 1828, died in Dedham, Mass.

2738. ARTEMAS WARD, born March 24, 1830, died November 21, 1910, in Dedham, Mass. He married in Dedham REBECCA LANGDON PRINCE, born in Boston, daughter of William Gordon and Amelia A. (Langdon) Prince.

He was a graduate of Harvard, B.A., 1849. He had financial connections in New York City and left a considerable estate.

MRS. Lamson has traveled extensively, particularly in Europe. She spent her childhood in Smyrna and was visiting there when the World War broke out.

With her husband's estate she inherited the original Order Book of General Artemas Ward during the siege of Boston, 1775–1776, and his later command in Boston 1776–1777. She carefully treasured this until June of 1924, when she donated it to the Massachusetts Historical Society, Boston, there to join the General's sword, his commission as Massachusetts Commander-in-Chief, and the Artemas Ward Manuscripts.

She resides in the family mansion on River Place, Dedham.

2739. MARY DEXTER, born 1833, died 1837 in Dedham, Mass.

1345. CHARLES TROWBRIDGE WARD,[6] born December 17, 1806, in Weston, Mass., died February 27, 1877. He married October 10, 1827, AMANDA ATHERTON, born March 17, 1810, daughter of Abner Atherton of Dedham, Mass.

Children:

2740. CHARLES TROWBRIDGE,[7] born March 19, 1829, in Boston.

2741. HENRY VINCENT, born April 21, 1836.

2742. HENRY ARTEMAS, born January 10, 1839.

2743. JOHN MARSHALL, born July 19, 1841, married November 1, 1872, ELIZABETH TOLMAN, born November 29, 1842, in Boston, daughter of James N. and Lucy K. (Holden) Tolman of Maine.

2744. CATHERINE DEXTER, born August 26, 1847.

* MR. WARD DIX KERLIN, secretary and treasurer of the Camden Forge Co., Camden, N. J., owns (with his brothers) a number of Ward Manuscripts, including several to General Artemas Ward from George Washington and his aide-de-camps.

1356. HENRY DANA ARTEMAS WARD,[6] born May 31, 1800, in Orangeburg, S. C., died April 4, 1827, in Columbia, S. C. He married November 9, 1820, his cousin ELIZA ANN TRACY (1351), born April 27, 1799, in Middletown, Conn.

He married (3) October 2, 1839, HANNAH DENCH FAIRBANKS, daughter of John and Hannah Raynor (Dench) Fairbanks of Hopkinton, Mass., and a lineal descendant of Jonathan Fairbanks who came with his six children from Sowerby in the West Riding of Yorkshire, England, to Boston, in 1663. She died June 2, 1908, in New York City.

His rise to fortune is a story full of interest. He first arrived in New York, a boy devoid of all business experience, to sell the produce of his father's large farm in Roxbury, Mass. He was quick to get the knack of metropolitan affairs and before many years had passed he was the owner of a prosperous ship-supply and chandlery business—the latter established in 1836 at 43 South Street—and with interests in several sailing vessels. His next step upwards was as the owner of several packets, running them to various parts of the earth but mainly to Cuba and other West-Indian islands. These packets were small and slow by modern standards, but they netted him a large income and from them during the next generation, under the direction of his son James Edward, grew the famous "Ward Line" to Cuba and the "Cuban Mail S.S. Line". On the day of his funeral all the flags in New York Harbor were placed at half mast.

Ward (1336), his father's cousin once removed. It is said that he was like his great-grandfather Ithamar Ward (574) in many ways. He was rather slow in movement and very particular and exact in all he did. When the Civil War broke out he was too young to enlist as a regular soldier but succeeded in being accepted as a boy to take care of the horse of Charles Grosvenor Ward (2726) and later became a drummer-boy. A family story connected with him states that on one occasion he was sitting on his drum watching a battle (the story has lived but the name of the battle has been forgotten) and, becoming thirsty, strolled over to a stream to get a drink of water. During the few minutes that he was gone, a shell burst the drum and nearly demolished a tree near by. After the termination of the war he went to California.

After two years, 1872–1874, at Harvard College, he entered the Cincinnati Law School, graduating 1875, and next the Law School of the University of Michigan, graduating 1876. He was admitted to the bar the same year and took up the practise of law in Cincinnati.

CHILDREN: John,[8] Leonard.

4395. GERTRUDE, born August 7, 1859, in Cincinnati, O., married June 1, 1881, in Cincinnati, ALEXANDER HARVEY LEWIS, born March 22, 1859, in Cincinnati, son of Alexander H. and Sarah Marion (Wiswell) Lewis.

His business interests are chiefly in steam apparatus manufacture and power plants. Residence, 3517 Clifton Avenue, Cincinnati.

CHILD: Gertrude.[8]

4396. H. WARD, born February 8, 1861, in Cincinnati, O., died February 18, 1915, in New York City. He married August 24, 1895, in Geneva, Switzerland, CAROLYN GOOD of New York City, born August 30, 1869, in Newark, N. J., daughter of James William and Annie (Jacques) Good.

His inventions have figured largely in industrial developments of the world. After graduation at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, 1883, he became one of the staff of four engineers selected by Thomas A. Edison to introduce the Edison central-station system, and at the early age of twenty-six was made general superintendent of the Western Electric Light Company of Chicago. The following year he formed the firm of Leonard & Izard, which made many important installations of central stations and electric railways. In 1889 the firm was bought out by the Edison interests, and Mr. Leonard was appointed general manager of the combined Edison interests of the United States and Canada, with headquarters in New York City. In 1896, while retaining the Edison management, he organized and was made president of the Ward Leonard Electric Co. of Hoboken. Two years later he severed his connections with the Edison interests and re-organized his own company under the name of the Ward Leonard Co. of New York, with offices at Bronxville.

In 1891 he completed his invention of the Ward Leonard system of motor control, and in 1892 he gave the world his multiple voltage system designed for operating motors and electric lights in factories. The value of the Ward Leonard system of control was demonstrated in battle during the Spanish-American War. After the war it was generally adopted by the United States Navy. It was also applied to the moving sidewalk at the Paris Exposition of 1900 after many ineffectual attempts to operate it, and became a feature of the exposition.

Others of Mr. Leonard's important inventions are the double arm circuit breaker, which has come into almost universal use, his lighting and starting systems for automobiles, and his form of change gear. Yet others relate to electrically driven reversible rolling mills, electric mine hoists, locomotives, elevators, rheostats, automatic switches, electric heaters, electric distributing systems, etc.

Altogether, he patented more than one hundred inventions, most of which are essential features of modern industry.

Mr. Leonard was a contributor to electrical papers and received many honors for his works. He was also in constant demand as a lecturer upon electrical subjects. He was a director and Fellow of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, and of the Inventors' Guild of America.

4397. MADELEINE, born October 29, 1863, died April 2, 1866, in Cincinnati, O.

4398. GENEVIEVE, born September 21, 1872, in Cincinnati, O., married July 28, 1920, in Edgartown, Mass., RICHARD WASHINGTON MIDDLETON, born September 2, 1862, in Washington, D. C., son of Samuel Eliot and Sophie (Washington) Middleton, and a descendant of Lawrence Washington, half-brother of George Washington.

He is a rubber goods manufacturer. During the World War he was Y. M. C. A. Hut Manager and Entertainment Director overseas. Residence, Edgartown, Mass.

2722. ARTEMAS WARD,[7] born May 20, 1848, in New York City, married December 3, 1872, in Philadelphia, REBECCA DUNWOODY ROBINSON, born June 20, 1843, in Jenkintown, Pa., died January 4, 1921, in New York City, daughter of Jonathan John and Mary (Miles) Robinson.

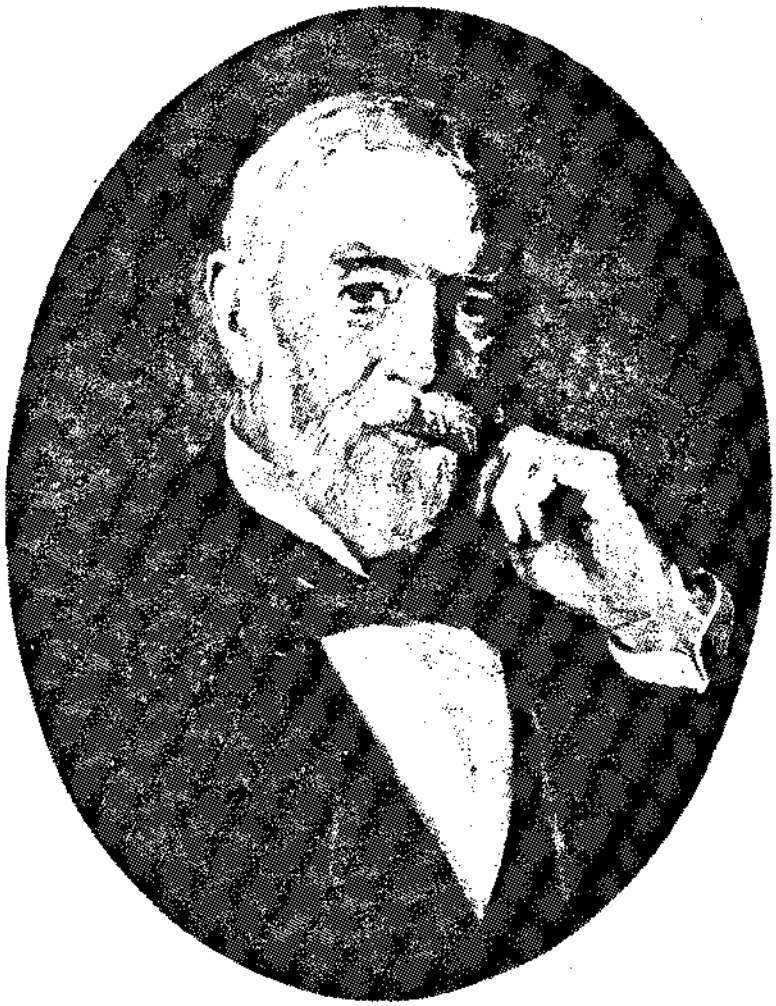

Mr. Ward—the publisher of this Genealogy—was born at 870 Broadway, New York City, and (with the exception of a year's travel and residence in Europe) spent both childhood and youth in the metropolis. His first position was in 1863 with the New York State Soldiers' Depot. Later, he moved to Philadelphia, entering the Cuban export and import business, and next founding and publishing the "Philadelphia Grocer." The distinction and individuality he gave to the paper attracted attention in the trade and brought from Enoch Morgan Sons' Company an offer of the position of advertising manager of "Sapolio." Both offer and acceptance were fortunate, for the result was to bring fame to Mr. Ward in the advertising and business worlds and to "Sapolio" everywhere.

Many are the stories that are told of the plans and measures by which he advanced the success of "Sapolio"—first as advertising manager, as already noted, and later as general manager of the company. Most famous was perhaps the voyage of Captain Andrews from Atlantic City to Palos, Spain, alone in a little boat named "Sapolio," during the summer of 1892—the same summer which saw replicas of Columbus's caravels sail westward from Palos, the port that he had left four hundred years earlier. Captain Andrews's boat was however not nearly so seaworthy as any one of the boats on the caravels of Columbus—it was only a tiny portable collapsible craft, less than fifteen feet in length. He nevertheless made the voyage successfully and became a "nine days" hero in Spain, feted and honored by the government. The value of the world advertising accruing to "Sapolio" by the press reports and discussions of the exploit can hardly be overestimated.

In 1899, while still with Enoch Morgan Sons' Company, Mr. Ward obtained the lease of the advertising privileges on the New York Elevated Railroad. This by renewals he still holds, largely increased in value by the addition of similar privileges on the Subway lines under the same management. The advertising lease carries with it merchandise rights, and that led Mr. Ward into the acquisition of chocolate and chewing-gum factories to meet the requirements of the station stands and slot-machines, and to the making of the slot-machines themselves.

He retired from Enoch Morgan Sons' Company in 1910 on the completion of a quarter of a century with the concern.

His faith in the steady growth of the city has resulted also in his acquiring large interests in surrounding lands, his holdings amounting to about 5,000 acres, and this in turn has drawn him into dairying to an increasing extent until today his herds comprise more than 300 fine milch-cows.

ARTEMAS WARD (2722)
Publisher of this Genealogy.

All of these and kindred interests are grouped in "Artemas Ward, Inc."

Mr. Ward's philanthropies have likewise been, and continue, many and varied, but in most cases he has avoided all publicity in connection with them.

Among his hobbies has been the study of foods. This culminated in 1923 in the Encyclopedia of Food, the most lavishly illustrated volume on the subject that has ever been produced, a standard reference work in libraries and the higher educational institutions.

His winter residence is at 6 East Seventy-eighth Street, New York City. His summer home is on Shelter Island, N. Y.

The Introduction to this volume tells of the strong interest that Mr. Ward has always felt in the Ward name and family, and briefly notes the more important of the various "Ward projects" which he has undertaken. These Ward projects are of intimate interest to descendants of William Ward of Sudbury, for every descendant is a spiritual sharer and copartner in the family history which they typify and memorialize.

Child:

4399. ARTEMAS, JR.,[8] born November 9, 1875, in Philadelphia, married October 24, 1911, in Concord, Mass., GRACE MORLEY ROBINSON, born August 6, 1877, in New York City, daughter of Dr. Frederick C. and Susannah (Lyon) Robinson.

He graduated from Harvard University, B.A., 1899, and the University of Buffalo Law School, 1903. Upon admission to the bar he entered the office of "Robinson, Biddle and Ward," New York. Later, he became a member of the firm of "Everett, Clarke, Benedict and Ward."

He served four consecutive terms (1907–1910) in the New York Assembly, in 1910 being the only one elected of the five Republican candidates in his district.

During his four years at Albany he stood consistently as the champion of the movement to change the election laws in order to do away with irregular methods at the polls, and introduced the so-called Signature Laws to prevent fraudulent registration and voting. As a member of the joint committees of the Senate and Assembly he assisted in the investigation of the telegraph and telephone companies which resulted in placing them under the Public Service Commission.

Commencing with 1912 he was for a number of years connected with the King Motor Car Company, the latter part of the time as President and General Manager.

2723. HENRY GALBRAITH WARD,[7] born April 19, 1851, in New York City, married August 13, 1891, in Newport, R. I., MABEL MARQUAND, born October 29, 1860, died November 23, 1896, in New York City, daughter of Henry Gurdon and Elizabeth Love (Allen) Marquand.

He graduated from the University of Pennsylvania, B.A. 1870, M.A. 1873, and received the degree of LL.D., 1917, serving also as a trustee of the University from 1906 to 1911. He was admitted to the bar in Philadelphia in 1873 and practised there for several years, in 1882 associating himself with George and A. Sydney Biddle under the firm name of "Biddle and Ward", and two years later opening an office in New York City, his home since that date. Later the firm became successively "Robinson, Bright, Biddle and Ward", and "Robinson, Biddle and Ward", conducting a large corporation practise. In 1907 he was appointed by President Roosevelt a United States Circuit Judge for the Second Circuit, subsequently becoming senior judge of the Circuit Court of Appeals. He retired under the act of February 5, 1919, and resigned October 31, 1924. Residence, 1018 Madison Avenue.

Children:

4400. GALBRAITH,[8] born August 9, 1892, in Newport, R. I., died in France, December 17, 1918. He graduated from Princeton University, B.A., 1915, and in December of the following year joined the French Ambulance Service. On the United States entering the World War he returned to New York and joined the Officers Training Camp, Plattsburg, N. Y. In April 1918 he went overseas again, this time as a private in Company M, 306th Regiment Infantry, 77th Division, became a corporal and later a scout-sergeant in charge of twenty-six scouts, and died December 17, 1918, of pneumonia in the hospital at Château Villain.

He was cited posthumously in General Orders No. 24 of the 77th Division, February 21, 1919, for gallantry as follows:

"Sergeant Galbraith Ward, Company M (deceased). On the night of November 2–3, 1918, while leading a detachment through a heavily shelled swamp between Theorgues and Harricourt, the soldier showed an utter disregard for his own safety in directing and helping the men under him to find shelter, and then walked over 100 yards through shell fire to the rescue of a soldier of the 304th Machine Gun Battalion, who had been severely wounded, bringing him to a place of safety."

May 3, 1923, the Distinguished Service Cross was presented to him posthumously with the following citation:

"Galbraith Ward, 1,703,569, Sergeant Company M, 306th Infantry, 77th Division. For extraordinary heroism in action near Notre Dame, France, September 10, 1918. Voluntarily accompanying an officer and enlisted man of his battalion in search of the Bois de Chandriere for the survivors of a battalion which had been relieved from its position in the line, he crossed an open field under terrific enemy fire a distance of 600 yards under constant observation of the enemy, sought and found several survivors and led them back to his own lines. Sergeant Ward was severely wounded in the performance of this hazardous duty and died of pneumonia shortly thereafter."

4401. MARQUAND, born December 9, 1894, in New York City, died in France, October 18, 1918. He entered Princeton University in the class of 1917. He was obliged to leave in January 1917 because of ill health, but received in July 1918 the War degree of B.A. He went overseas from Camp Dix, N. J., in May 1918 as a private in Company C., 312th Regiment Infantry, 78th Division, and was killed in action at Talma Farm, Grand Pré, on the eighteenth of October following. He was cited posthumously in General Orders No. 6 of the 78th Division, March 17, 1919, as follows:

"Private Marquand Ward, Company C, 312th Infantry. Before meeting death in action at Talma Farm the 18th of October, 1918, manifested a signal courage and fearlessness, advancing in the face of a murderous machine gun fire, displaying to his comrades an example of a disdain of danger and of initiative in attack, reaching and falling at the nearest point to the enemy attained by his company that day."

The two brothers are buried side by side, R. 17 Nos. 39 and 40, in the American Cemetery at Romagne-sous-Montfaucon, Meuse-Argonne, France.

"Because of you we will be glad and gay,
Remembering you, we will be brave and strong,
And hail the advent of each dangerous day,
And meet the great adventure with a song."

2724. SAMUEL DENNY WARD,[7] born April 3, 1826, in Pomfret, Conn., died November 19, 1908, in Shrewsbury, Mass. He married May 26, 1853, in Shrewsbury, ABIGAIL MARION HAPGOOD, born August 27, 1829, in Shrewsbury, died April 16, 1917, in Shrewsbury, daughter of Joab and Elizabeth (Eager) Hapgood.

On his marriage, his father built a house for him near the site of the Henshaw House, taken down in the preceding year. Later he purchased the surrounding fifty acres from his father; and there he lived and worked for more than half a century. There resides today his second daughter, Florence Grosvenor.

He was all his life a farmer, struggling with the farmer's problems but helped at many points by his unusual mechanical skill. He was also identified with various local organizations—among others, as a charter member of the Shrewsbury Historical Society and its president for several terms, and for thirty-five years one of the trustees of the Ministerial Fund.

Children, born in Shrewsbury, Mass.:

4402. ELLA HAPGOOD,[8] born March 9, 1854, died January 26, 1915, in Shrewsbury, Mass. She was for many years assistant librarian, taking special interest in the children, particularly those whose home life gave no strong upward influence and encouragement.

4403. FLORENCE GROSVENOR, born March 6, 1856. She is the only descendant of General Artemas Ward (274) now living in his home town of Shrewsbury, Mass. Her house contains a number of revolutionary and other heirlooms. She recently donated to the Massachusetts Historical Society, General Ward's own copy of the diary he kept on the Ticonderoga Expedition. She has been custodian of the Artemas Ward House since the death of her sister Clara Denny Ward.

4404. CLARA DENNY, born December 3, 1857, died January 18, 1921, in Shrewsbury, Mass. Like her sister Ella she was an experienced and competent librarian. For several years she was on the staff of the New York Public Library, and later assistant librarian in Shrewsbury and custodian of the Artemas Ward House and its valuable manuscript collection (now in the Massachusetts Historical Society). She was well versed in local history and topography and expended much labor on a map of Shrewsbury planned to tell the story of its early land ownership—a work she was unfortunately unable to complete.

2727. ELLEN GROSVENOR WARD,[7] born January 18, 1832, in Shrewsbury, Mass., died December 31, 1916, in Cleveland. She married October 19, 1854, in Shrewsbury, ISRAEL RICHMOND WATERS of Marietta, O., born October 23, 1823, in Pittsburgh, Pa., died December 9, 1892, in Marietta, son of Asa and Kezia Paddock (Richmond) Waters.

Children, born in Marietta, O:

4405. WILSON,[8] born October 11, 1855. He graduated from Marietta, O., College, B.A. 1876, M.A. 1879, Trinity College, Hartford, Conn., M.A. 1888; and Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, 1890. Since 1892 he has been rector of All Saints', Chelmsford, Mass. From 1894 to 1898 he was also in charge of the House of Prayer, Lowell. He is the author of the "Ancestry of the Waters Family of Marietta, O.," "History of Chelmsford," "Symbolism," etc.; trustee and treasurer of the Adams Library, Chelmsford; and librarian of the Lowell Historical Society.

4406. HARRIET WARD, born March 19, 1857. Residence, Marietta, O.

4407. ELLEN RICHMOND, born October 10, 1858, died March 29, 1878, in Marietta, O.

4408. ALICE BRADFORD, born January 28, 1861, married October 25, 1888, in Marietta, O., WILLIAM PUTNAM CURTIS of Chicago, born July 17, 1853, in Harmar, (now the west side of Marietta), son of Augustus Stephen and Charlotte Minerva (Putnam) Curtis and a lineal descendant of General Israel Putnam. Residence, 1513 East 118th Street, Cleveland.

CHILD: Dorothy.[8]

4409. MARY ISABELLE, born August 19, 1863, died February 23, 1883, in Marietta, O.

4410. CHARLES THOMAS, born September 29, 1865, died December 10, 1899, in Columbus, O. He graduated from Hobart College, Geneva, N. Y., 1887, taking the honors of his class in chemistry, and from Northwestern University Medical School, Chicago, 1893. He was a practising physician in Chicago and in Marietta, president of the Medical Society of Marietta, and secretary of the Washington County, O., Medical Society.

4411. ISRAEL RICHMOND, born September 24, 1867, died November 3, 1912, in Columbus, O. During the Civil War he served with the McClellan Dragoons and 12th Illinois Cavalry. He was wounded, and spent a short time in Libby Prison. In 1869 he took up a homestead in Norfolk, Neb., and dwelt on it for nineteen years. Later he moved to his present address, Carpinteria, Cal.

Children:

4412. WALTER GROSVENOR,[8] born July 9, 1865, in Chicago.

4413. ARTHUR CLARY, born September 14, 1866, in Chicago, died January 17, 1870, in Norfolk, Neb.

4414. CHARLES HENSHAW, born November 5, 1872, in Norfolk, Neb., graduated from Pomona College, B.A., 1896, and from Yale, M.A., 1899.

He was for nineteen years teacher of English in Taft School, Watertown, Conn., and is the author of several standard and widely used text-books. The best known are "Sentence and Theme" (whose distribution has already exceeded half a million copies), "Theme-Building," "Junior Highway to English," "Junior Grammar," "What is English?"—a manual for teachers—and a little volume of wider character entitled "Exploring Nature." The last-named consists of a selection of authoritative extracts—chosen for the clear simplicity of their style—covering both the universe in general and many earthly manifestations of nature, and well calculated to stimulate a student's appetite for deeper reading. His latest work, "How Life Succeeds, a Plain Account of Evolution", will be published in the fall of this year (1925). Address, 107 Whitney Ave., New Haven, Conn.

4415. ELIZABETH ANTOINETTE, born January 27, 1874, in Norfolk, Neb., graduated from Pomona College, B.A., 1898. She conducted the Carpinteria, Cal., Private High School for twelve years, and has written occasional magazine articles on California subjects.

in Coquimbo, Chile, daughter of Thomas Tarlton and Jacoba (Edwards) Smith.

He divided his time between his interests in Chile and California. In the former, he came to be known as one of the oldest United States residents. In California, he founded the town of Hayward, Alameda County, and belonged to the "Society of California Pioneers." His remains were carried from Valparaiso to Hayward for burial there by his son, Charles (Carlos) Thomas Atherton Ward, in compliance with a request expressed in his will.

It may here be noted that residents of Valparaiso pronounce its name "Val-par-a-i-so," thus bringing out both the phonetic beauty of the Spanish syllables and the meaning—"Paradise Valley"—intended by its founder nearly four hundred years ago.

Children:

He was commissioned captain of Company B, 47th Ohio Volunteer Infantry on June 15, 1861, and served until August 9, 1864. He was awarded the much-prized Congressional medal of honor. It bears the following inscription:

"The Congress
to Captain William H. Ward,
47th Inft., Ohio Volunteers,
For distinguished gallantry,
At Vicksburg, Mississippi,
May 3, 1863."

The act thus commemorated was volunteering with a part of his company to man a little tugboat and run two supply barges past the Confederate batteries on a bright, moonlight night. More than half of the boat's crew were lost and the others were captured by the enemy. The tugboat was blown up and the barges set on fire and burned by Confederate shells.

In 1866, Captain Ward took his family to Kansas and they resided for some time in Topeka. In 1897 they moved to Kansas City, Mo., and later to Kansas City, Kans., where he still resides at 753 Minnesota Avenue.

He lived on his father's farm until twenty years old, then for several years was in Northfield, Vt., first as clerk and then as partner in a general store. His wife's health failing, they moved to Florida in 1880, and there in Orange Park, Clay County, he essayed orange growing as a means of livelihood, undertaking also the duties of postmaster. Between three and four years experience demonstrated that they were too far north for successful commercial orange growing, so they moved south to Winter Park and again started the development of an orange grove, this time essaying grapefruit also. All went well until the big freeze of 1894–1895 killed to the ground every fruit-tree in both central and northern Florida—which included nearly all the orange groves in the state, as the southern part of the state had not at that time been developed. By this time Mrs. Ward had regained her health and strength but both she and her husband had lost all desire to return north, and so with faith in the future he started in once more, and at this writing has successfully produced several bearing groves. His home place of about ten acres, situated on a beautiful clear-water lake, is one of the most attractive in Winter Park.

Mr. Ward has been a deacon of the Congregational Church of Winter Park for a great many years and its treasurer for eighteen.

His first position of responsibility was with the Boston & Maine Railroad as station-master of the little Medford Hillside station, a development of Medford, Boston. From that post he raised himself to the eminence of an internationally famous electrical and hydraulic engineer—becoming a millionaire in the process—to meet a dramatic death by drowning when the "Lusitania" was torpedoed during the World War, his wife going down with him to the same fate.

While still the station-master of Medford Hillside he enrolled for a special course at Tufts College. He graduated A.M.B., in 1883, and was appointed to the position of Walker instructor of mathematics. Later he received from Tufts the degree of LL.D. and the honorary degree of Sc.D.

In 1886 he made his first sally into the practical business of the world—during that year, and 1887 and part of 1888, serving as a mining engineer in the United States and Brazil. In 1888 and 1889 he reorganized the Somerville, Mass., Electric Light Company, and formed the Wakefield, Mass., Electric Company. Next came his appointment as chief engineer with the task of installing electrical equipment on the consolidated lines of the West End Street Railway Company, Boston; and then the position of consulting engineer of the Toronto Electrical Street Railroad Company. While in Canada, he also reorganized the Montreal street-railroad system, the St. John, N. B., street railroad, and the Halifax Light and Tramway Power Company. In 1894 he electrified the consolidated surface lines of New York City (the Metropolitan Street Railway Company), continuing as chief engineer until 1899 and remaining as consulting engineer until his death.

His ability as a hydraulic and electrical engineer led him to undertake vast enterprises in foreign fields. Brazil, Mexico, and Spain particularly are indebted to him for overcoming obstacles in the development of their water-power, resulting in the construction of huge dams which brought modern systems of light and power to their cities. At the time of his death he was serving as president and director of several of these companies, with offices in both New York and London.

He lived with his parents until twenty-four years old, then joining a party going to California. They traveled by mule team (for that was before the days of transcontinental railways) and consumed three months on the road. He worked four or five months in a California sawmill, and then returned to Galena and secured a position as farm overseer. Next, dissatisfied with the schooling he had received, he entered Knox College, Galesburg, Ill., and worked his way through for nearly four years, specializing in astronomy and geology—on which subjects he frequently lectured in later years—but leaving in 1869, a few months before prospective graduation, in order to join his father, his brother Chandler, and three brothers-in-law, in taking up free homesteads in Kossuth County, near Wesley, Ia. There he married and settled down—combining farming and school-teaching for a number of years—increasing his land holdings and adding a cheese factory. Later, he moved to Stilson and then to Garner, where he purchased a hotel and conducted it until his death shortly after.

Mrs. Ward had been a school-teacher before marriage. She continued the hotel business for five years after her husband's death and then moved to Algona, Ia. She and her five daughters lived there until 1903, when she and three of her daughters—Olive, Amy, and Minnie—went to North Dakota and she, Olive, and Amy took up homesteads near Stanton. She now lives with Amy in Sanish, N. D.

INDEXES

NAMES OTHER THAN WARD

THE SCOPE OF THE INDEXES

These Indexes—the first, of Ward names; the second, of names other than Ward—list all the recorded descendants of William Ward of Sudbury, and also their wives or husbands in so far as they are given in the Genealogy.

The numbers are of those pages which contain the fullest information of the individuals named.

Married women are indexed by both their maiden and their marriage surnames, including marriages before or following that to a Ward descendant.

In the first section, that of Ward names, the names of those who are Wards by birth carry their generation numbers.

The Ward names without generation numbers are Wards by marriage, or (as in a few instances) members of other Ward families.

If you do not find the name you seek, look under its variants and diminutives. A girl known to her friends as "Betty" or "Betsey" or "Bess" or "Lizzie" may have any one of these as her name of record or she may be recorded and indexed as "Elizabeth." There are many similar examples. See also the reference to different spellings on page 63.

Note finally that it frequently happens that a name occurs more than once on a page.
